BOY NINES BATTLE

HELP!!!!!
!HELP!!!
!!POLICE!

THE police problem of Boston is one of the most important ones that confronts the people of this municipality. It is the biggest problem, for that matter, in any city. But it has reached an acute stage here. Police Commissioner O'Meara's term expires on June 5 and it will then be up to Governor Foss to appoint a successor.

It is not stating it too emphatically when it is said that this will be probably the most vital act of the Governor's administration, so far as the welfare of Boston is concerned. The Police Commissioner in Boston is a mighty power. He should be the best man that intelligence and conscentious effort can find. The people have confidence that Governor Foss will give the matter the consideration the subject demands.

But, after all, who in Boston knows most about the police business? Why, the policemen themselves!

The AMERICAN has asked all of the policemen of Boston to tell their preference for the position and why. The result will be found in to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN. It should be of great assistance to Governor Foss and illuminating to the whole city. The identity of none of the policemen is to be disclosed, of course.

New England has a veritable "House of Mirth." A sordid condition, startling in its character, that rivals the notorious political scandals of New Jersey, has been found in this section of the United States. Things have been going on, right under the eyes of the people, that will amaze them when the facts are made public for the first time in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN. This will be an exclusive feature.

Five hundred million dollars of wealth in one block—the wealthiest block in the world! It is in the famous so-called "Gold Coast" at Harvard, where the student sons of wealth congregate. There is nothing like it in any block of New York, London or Paris. In to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN interesting inside facts about the life in this zone of wealth will appear.

Do the women readers of the AMERICAN think that a baseball player ought to have his uniform cleaned and pressed for each game? Well, you will like to read what the greatest woman baseball expert in the world has to say along these lines in tomorrow's AMERICAN. She knows baseball and has a lot of suggestions to the players as to how they can make the game more attractive—to the women patrons at least. No other newspaper will have this timely feature.

In connection with this will be new and interesting facts, written by the AMERICAN'S experts, on the greatest baseball season Boston ever saw, which will soon open here. Why the greatest season? Well, that's just what you will find when you read tomorrow's baseball section of the paper.

Things are buzzing in Washington and these are momentous days in the life of this nation. It begins to look as though the much-battered Common People were at last to get after their oppressors and have a fair show to enjoy the things of life. Alfred Henry Lewis, John Temple Graves and other brilliant writers will tell in to-morrow's AMERICAN with vivid pens the real situation at the nation's capital.

MYSTERY IN JEWEL ROBBERY

Mystery surrounds the robbery of the store of the Russian Importing Company at No. 429 Boylston street, near Berkeley, sometime last night, when $1,100 worth of money and jewelry was stolen.

The theft was not discovered until sometime after the store was opened to-day. Mrs. S. O. Ochs, the proprietor, went to the safe and discovered that a small compartment containing the money and jewelry was missing. She immediately reported to the police of the Back Bay Station. In addition to the money and jewelry valuable papers were taken.

Mrs. Ochs lives on the floor above the store. She heard nothing last night that aroused her suspicions. She herself put the valuables in the safe, and her nephew, George Kantor, employed by her, locked the store about 8 o'clock.

There is a combination on the safe, but this was not in use. The door of it was shut and the handle turned. It could have been opened by anybody gaining entrance to the store.

When the police investigated to-day they found the doors and windows had not been tampered with. They found them locked, and Mrs. Ochs is certain that the door was locked when she opened the store. The police believe that entrance was gained by means of false keys.

The valuables stolen consisted of $200 in money, two diamond rings, two pearl rings an emerald and diamond necklace, an emerald and diamond bracelet, and an old gold locket containing a picture of Mrs. Ochs, a silver snuff box and an ivory match box. The whole is valued at $900. The store is in the heart of the Back Bay shopping district.

When the police left the store, after making their investigation, Mrs. Ochs collapsed. She was taken upstairs and was obliged to take to her bed.

Kantor told a reporter that he was certain that he closed the safe when he went home last night. He said that he did not know the valuables were in there.

$144,952 DEBTS OF J. FRANK HALE

J. Frank Hale of No. 1,870 Beacon street, Brookline, husband of Tessie Mooney Hale, the former actress, and known in Boston and New York as a man-about-town and patron of sport, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the United States District Court. He listed liabilities of $144,952.33 and assets of $31,472.

One of the heaviest creditors is the brokerage firm of Hornblower & Weeks, or Congressman John W. Weeks, who is down for $13,000. This is secured by 240 shares of the Mitchell, Woodbury Company.

Part of the liabilities consists of $95,000 of "accommodation" paper, which Hale indorsed for his wife, $50,000 of this being claimed by the Worcester North Savings Trust and the balance by the Newburyport Institution for Savings.

J. Frank Hale was formerly of the brokerage firm of Longley, Hale & Co. In his bankruptcy petition he calls himself a clerk.

FOUR FLEE FROM FIRE SET IN CELLAR

A family of four persons was driven from their home in Malden early to-day by fire believed to be of incendiary origin. The fire destroyed the interior of the home of Walter E. Brown at No. 17 Florence street, Malden. The police are investigating.

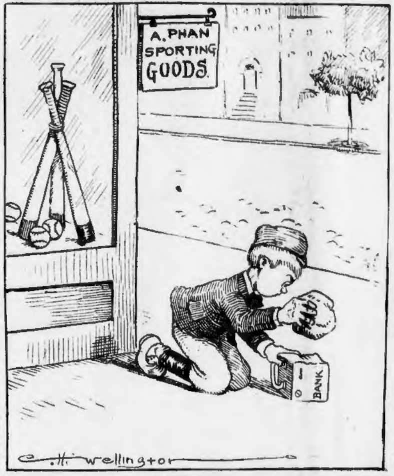
Mrs. Brown was awakened about 1:30 by the flames and smoke. The fire was then burning fiercely between the partitions. She aroused her husband and then helped her mother, Mrs. M. E. Learned, and her sister, Miss Violet Learned, to make their escape.

The fire started in a wood closet in the cellar. This morning a can partially filled with kerosene was found there. The family is at a loss to account for the presence of the oil. They believe it was placed there by the person who set the fire. The damage will amount to about $1,000.

MELROSE ICEHOUSES BURN; LOSS $25,000

Towner's ice plant on Swain's Pond avenue, in the eastern section of Melrose, was destroyed by fire early to-day. It was the property of Miss Orrietta Towner. The estimated loss is $10,000 on ice and $15,000 on buildings. The police believe the fire was of incendiary origin. With the exception of the home of Miss Towner, Mrs. William Ford and Arthur E. Towner, owners of the plant, which is 500 feet west of the scene of the fire, surrounding property was at no time in danger. The burned property consisted of seven connected wooden buildings, 40 feet in width and 100 feet long. Over 5,000 tons of ice were destroyed.

THERE'S A REASON.



GOULD'S LAST MATCH TO-DAY

Jay Gould played his last championship tennis match in Boston this afternoon. He is to be married on April 29. He figures he will have no more time for tennis. Mr. Gould left the Hotel Touraine early this afternoon for the Tennis and Racquet Club on Boylston street to meet Joshua Crane, Jr., in the finals for the national indoor tennis championship.

At the hotel this noon he was asked about his sister, Vivien, now Lady Decies, about his own coming marriage and his future tennis plans. He said:

"I have not heard much from Lady Decies. You see, she and Decies are on their honeymoon. But I have received two or three post cards from her and I judge she is very happy."

Mr. Gould will be married on April 29 at Lakewood, N. J., to Miss Anna Douglas Graham, daughter of Princess Kailiani of the Hawaiian royal family.

"I think I shall be very happy in my new life," said Mr. Gould, when his own marriage was mentioned. Then he added:

"I shall give up tennis, that is, I shall give up playing matches. This afternoon's match is the last I shall ever play. I am matched to meet Mr. Crane this afternoon and I hope to win. But it is too hard work, chasing from one country to another and from one city to another for tennis matches."

Mr. Gould will return to Lakewood tomorrow or Monday.

Crane won his right to meet Gould for the championship by defeating C. T. Russell Thursday in the elimination matches. Mr. Crane, who has been national champion three times, beat Mr. Russell three straights sets, 6—2, 6—3, 6—1.

ASKS SUPREME COURT FOR A TAX OPINION

The Legislative Committee on Taxation reported an order in the House asking the opinion of the Supreme Court as to the constitutional power of the Legislature to enact a law for a uniform State tax rate on personal property. At the present time taxes upon personal property are assessed by the local assessors in the city or town where the personal property is held by the owners. The order was held over until Monday.

2 FATALLY HURT BY FALL OF GIRDER

NEW YORK, April 8.—Two men were fatally injured this afternoon and a score of iron workers at work on the building being erected by the Bankers' Trust Company at Wall and Nassau streets narrowly escaped with their lives when a ten-ton steel girder crashed from the 24th-story to the 19th floor.

LAWRENCE CASE IN HIGH COURT

The Lawrence city government wrangle landed in the Supreme Court when a petition for a writ of mandamus was filed by members of the City Council and Board of Aldermen to compel other members of both bodies to meet in joint convention to elect a city treasurer and collector of taxes. Judge Sheldon issued an order of notice for Tuesday.

Those who petition for the writ are Alderman Thomas M. Jordan and Councilmen David Noonan, Michael H. Collopy, Michael J. Fay, John A. O'Donnell, Thomas A. Welch, Albin Cirten, Joseph M. O'Dowd. The defendants are Aldermen William H. Callahan, Joseph Hayes, Michael A. Scanlon, James R. Walker and John Hennessey and Councilmen Adam Boehn, Robert Leupold, Bernard J. Keaveny, Thaddeus J. Bayley, Frank B. Foley, John F. Morrissey, John McMahon, Frederick W. Briggs, James J. Carney, Joseph A. Hurley and James H. Quinn.

By a vote of four to two the aldermen refused to meet the council, according to the allegation in the petition. William A. Kelleher, the present incumbent of the office, is holding over until a successor is elected. Cornelius F. Sullivan is a candidate for the office.

PARKER HEADS TECH CLASS DAY COMMITTEE

At the first meeting of the Technology 1911 class-day committee, Theodore B. Parker, Allston, was elected chairman; Orville B. Denison, South Framingham, vice-chairman; William C. Salisbury, Chicago secretary, and Harold M. Davis, Dorchester, treasurer. Chairman Parker appointed seven sub-committees. Class day will be June 5 and the graduation exercises will take place the following afternoon—both in Huntington Hall, Rogers building.

FINDS TUBERCULOSIS CURE IN SOUTH SEAS

SAN FRANCISCO, April 8.—Dr. L. Bellonne, who arrived here on the steamer Mariposa, after spending four years in Tahiti as chief surgeon of the French military forces, says he is sure he has discovered a concoction of herbs that will cure tuberculosis. Bellonne is on his way to Paris, where he will render a report on his investigation. The herb grows only in the South Sea Islands.

SUICIDE BY LEAP OFF ROOF

G. Frank Cutting, a South Sudbury farmer, killed himself in Revere this afternoon by jumping from the roof of the Hotel Columbia to the sidewalk. The distance is forty-five feet. Death is believed to have been instantaneous.

Cutting came to the hotel to-day, arriving there at 11:30 a. m. He was visiting his sister, Mrs. Harvey T. Wing. Business troubles that he had been worrying about for some time are believed to have caused him to take his own life.

He leaves a wife and three children in Sudbury.

Mrs. Wing stated that her brother appeared despondent when he got to the hotel. She asked him to join her at lunch at noon, but he refused. Mrs. Wing sat down to the table with her husband and left her brother in an adjoining room. It was at this time that he made him way to the roof.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Wing were startled a few minutes later to hear the crash of his body as it fell to the sidewalk. They ran to him, but could do nothing for him. He had struck the pavement head first and his skull was crushed. The force of his fall had left a deep depression in the pavement.

OPPOSE RISING SUN LIGHT BID

The municipal and metropolitan committee of the Boston Chamber of Commerce reported to the Chamber against the acceptance of the Rising Sun Company's bid to light the city and sent the following conclusions to the City Council, which is to take up the matter next Monday:

"1—That the Chamber oppose the acceptance of a non-competitive bid by the city for street lighting until every agency for securing additional bids has been exhausted.

"2—That the Chamber recommend to the City Council, if a public hearing is given on these contracts, that new bids be advertised for and that every effort be made to secure additional bids.

"3—That if the bid submitted by the Rising Sun Company is likely to receive favorable consideration, the Chamber recommend that the contract be entered into for a much shorter term than ten years, as there are undoubtedly better lights on the market at the present time than are now furnished by the company."

The report says that A. A. Rothenberg suggests that the city buy its own lights, but declares that he is interested in an automatic ligher which he is trying to sell the city.

WILLIAMS MEN TAKE TRIP IN A BALLOON

NORTH ADAMS, April 8.—Two members of Williams College Aeronautical Society, H. Percy Shearman of London, England, and John J. Haas of Williamstown, made the first flight of the season from here to-day, ascending in balloon North Adams No. 1.

Weather conditions were perfect and the balloon, drifting along with the wind, soon disappeared out of sight in a southwesterly direction. Reports were received here that the air craft passed over Mt. Greylock and it was expected that a landing would be made somewhere in New York State.

LEWIS AND GUNTHER IN PARIS BOUT TO-DAY

PARIS, April 8.—Willie Lewis, an American middleweight and the pugilistic idol of Paris, meets George Gunther, the colored Philadelphia middleweight, in a twenty-round bout to-night before the Cirque de Paris. Lewis is the favorite. He has been absent from France for nearly a year, while Gunther has been boxing before French and English sporting clubs in the same length of time.

STAR RACE HORSE DEAD.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 8.—W. H. Fizer's $7,000 race horse, Friend Harry, died at Churchill Downs to-day of pneumonia.

DIE IN FIRE AFTER BIG EXPLOSION

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 8.—State inspectors at Littleton, twenty miles from here, say that 135 of the 165 miners entombed by an explosion in the Banner mine of the Pratt Consolidated Coal Company are dead. More than fifteen bodies had been taken from the ruins at an early hour to-day, according to a report to the State mine inspector. About one-half of the victims are white men, the remainder negroes.

FORTY MEN ARE RESCUED.

Thirty men have been taken out of the mine. Rescue parties have arrived and have gone into the mine.

About half the miners are white men, the remainder negroes. The Pratt company is one of the biggest independent operators in the South. Requests that physicians, nurses and medical supplies be sent were telephoned to this city. Special trains were immediately made up to bear the relief workers to the mine and rushed out.

The force of the explosion wrecked the telegraph wires, cutting off communication by that source. Safety devices for the use of the miners in rescue parties were sent on the special trains.

The Banner mines are about two miles from the village of Littleton, Ala. Most of the miners are State convicts.

73 BODIES TAKEN FROM BURNING MINE NEAR SCRANTON, PA.

SCRANTON, Pa., April 8.—Seventy-three bodies have been taken from the Pancoast mine at Throop, where 100 or more miners died by suffocation during a fire at the foot of the shaft 750 feet below the surface. Sixteen more bodies are still unrecovered.

Among the dead is Joseph Evans, chief of the government's mine rescue car force, who in his zeal went too far in advance of his men and perished. Another victim was John R. Perry, councilman of the first ward of this city.

All hope of finding any of the miners alive had been abandoned as the ravages of the fire were disclosed to the relief workers. The improvised morgue is filled with bodies so badly burned that the identification of many of them will be impossible. Among the dead are many mere boys.

Sacrified Lives in Vain.

John R. Perry, a councilman in Scranton, Foreman Knight and Fire Boss Dawes were at work in a chamber near the mouth of the shaft when the fire started. They had plenty of time to reach the surface of the workings. Instead of doing this, however, they rushed toward the chambers on the China vein to warn other members of the shift. They needlessly sacrificed their lives for, by the time they had given the alarm, the escape of all was cut off.

The postures of the men found in the mine told the agony of their death. The clothing of nearly all was burned off. To avoid the wave of flame many of them had their arms folded across their faces for protection. Their bodies were charred black. One little twelve-year-old trap boy who drove a mule was found with his arms around the neck of the animal. Both had died together.

Among those who were able to escape—there were nearly two hundred—were scores who begged to-day to be allowed to enter the shaft and assist in searching for bodies. Many were pressed into service.

Frantic Crowd Rushes Morgue.

State constabulary were brought to the scene of the disaster during the night. A large majority of the families of Throop sustained a loss in the disaster and feeling is running high. A demonstration by frantic men and women about the morgue to-day made it necessary to establish a strong cordon around the building. The State constabulary are armed with service revolvers and ball cartridges and are reinforced by county authorities and special police.

Fire Boss James Vickers, who escaped when the fire started, told a graphic story. "I don't know how I got out," he said today. "I remember vaguely wrapping my coat around my head then running forward blindly. The flames spread so rapidly that my clothing was nearly burned off before I got to safety. I suddenly became unconscious, but by this time I was beyond the danger line and was afterwards dragged out."

SCHOOL BATTLE AT DORCHESTER

A large crowd of schoolboy baseball fans packed the stands at the Dunbar avenue grounds, Dorchester, to its greatest capacity this afternoon when Dorchester High and Medford High crossed bats in the first big schoolboy contest of the season. Both teams were in perfect shape for the battle, and went into the fray with the "do or die" spirit.

This year Medford is represented by a rattling good team, and bids fair to capture the flag in the Suburban League unless the other clubs in the league show exceptionally fine form.

On the other hand Dorchester High is represented by no slouch of a nine this year, and if early season reports count for anything should take more than one fall out of the top notchers before the season closes.

The idea weather conditions put the youthful ball tossers in fine fettle, and the way that they went into the game was a caution. Even the most rabid fan could have no kick coming from the weather man.

BOTH RUSTLER GAMES CALLED OFF FOR RAIN

LYNCHBURG, Va., April 8.—The rain was turned lose again on Virginia to-day and the final game between the Rustlers and the Lynchburg Club was called off. The engagement of the Yanigans at Roanoke also was put on the blink by the downpour, so Manager Tenney wired Scout Billy Hamilton to hustle his charges over here.

The whole squad left this afternoon for Baltimore, arriving in Jack Dunn's preserves about midnight. There will be a game with the Orioles to-morrow and another on Monday. To-morrow's date has been kept a secret, for the Baltimore management was afraid the authorities would get busy and stop the alleged desecration of the Sabbath.

Sam Frock, a Baltimore boy, will probably pitch for the Rustlers. News of the deal by which Billy Burke goes to Montreal in exchange for Catcher Bridges was heard with regret in the Boston camp, for Billy has become one of the most popular men in the bunch. His mates are confident that he will be recalled at the end of the coming season and that he will win a big league home before he is through.

3 NEGROS LYNCHED BY A GEORGIA MOB

ATLANTA, Ga., April 8.—Three negroes, Dawson Jordan, Charlie Pickett and Murray Burton, were taken from jail from Ellaville, Ga., early to-day and lynched by a mob. They were being held for the murder of Newton Eason, a white man on January 2. The mob overpowered the sheriff and took the negroes out. One escaped and was running away when he was brought down by a dozen bullets. The other two were strung to trees and riddled with bullets.

PUT DOWN NEW LISBON REVOLT

LISBON, April 8.—Naval officers and men made an unsuccessful attempt to seize the arsenal to-day and to assassinate the Minister of Marine.

Loyalist troops suppressed the uprising and the ringleaders were arrested.

The uprising to-day was one of a series of monarchist plots which have been directed against the new republic. The outbreak was the most carefully planned of all. Agents in the employ of the plotters had been working for weeks among the army and navy offering bribes for desertion. Senor Gomes, the Minister of Marine, had a narrow escape. Except for the loyalty of the troops to the republic the plot would likely have succeeded. The Monarchists had planned to take the city, seize the warships in the harbor and proclaim the overthrow of the government.

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 8.—The State of Minnesota to-day lost its great battle with the railroads. The United States Circuit Court of the Eighth District handed down a decision in the rate case upholding the railroads.

SAY VITTOZZI IS A PERJURER

VITERBO, April 8—Father Ciro Vittozzi, godfather of Enrico Alfano, head of the Neapolitan Camorra, and known as the "Guardian Angel" of the terrorists, was charged with perjury when the Camorrist trial opened to-day and the priest resumed his story upon the witness stand. The priest was amazed at the charge and declared with a scriptural quotation that he spoke only the truth.

Vittozzi had sworn in his direct examination by President Bianchi of the Assize Court and Crown's Advocate Sontero, that Deputy Detilla, a police official of Naples, had stolen a lock of hair from the priest's desk, claiming it to be from the head of Vittozzi's mistress. The witness yesterday accused Detilla of attempting to make him reply to accusations by showing him the strands of hair and accusing him of unpriestly conduct.

When the court was opened to-day President Bianci read a telegram from Deputy Detilla, who had sent it from Naples.

"I have never known Vittozzi, and his story concerning me was pure invention," Detilla had wired.

The Neapolitan official further declared that he could prove that the testimony given to him by Vittozzi was false. The priest sat with immobile countenance while President Bianchi read the telegram aloud.

"What have you to say in answer?" asked the court.

"If you will give me time I will present complete confirmation of my evidence," answered Vittozzi. "We were formerly on the friendliest terms in Naples," he continued. "My clerical work brought me into communication with wrongdoers who sought spiritual aid when they got into trouble. Hence I became well acquainted with many police officials, including Signor Detilla."

PER UNA CIOCCA FALSO O VERITA?

VITERBO, 8 Aprile.—Il padre Vito Vittozzi, padrino di Enrico Alfano, del capo della Camorra napoletana, il prete conosciuto quale il "buon angelo" dei camoristi, oggi, alla ripresa del processo contro la associazione di terroristi, ha riepilogato le sue dichiarazioni. Padre Vittozzi, oggi, e' stato accusato di falsita'; ma egli si e' mantenuto impassibile ed ha dichiarato, con citazioni bibliche latine, che tutto quanto ha detto e' la pura verita'.

La Ciocca di Capelli.

Durante l'interrogatorio, fattogli dal Presidente dell 'Assisie e day Procuratore del Re, il prete Vittozzi ha dichiarato che il delegato di P. S. Detilla, di Napoli, aveva rubato una ciocca di capelli dal tavolo dell'interrogato, per poi affermare che quella ciocca provenisse da una amante del prete. Il Vittozzi fece ieri una lunga arringa in sua difesa, accusando poi il Detilla di aver tentato, provocato una sua risposta alle accuse fattegli, mostrandogli le treccie di capelli ed accusandolo di condotta libertina, non conveniente e riprovevole in persona di un ministro di dio.

Stamane, quando la Corte apri' l'udienza, il Presidente Bianchi lesse un telegrama del delegato Detilla, inviato da Napoli.

Il prete Accusato di Falsita.

"Io ho mai conosciuto il Vittozzi, e la storia che egli inventa e che mi concerne e' una falsita," he telegrafto il Detilla.

Nello stesso telegramma, il mittente dichiara che egli potra' provare che le affermazioni fatte dal Vittozzi riguardo alla ciocca dei capelli sono completamente false.

Il prete Vittozzi, mentre il Presidente Bianchi leggeva il telegramma, se ne stava calmo ed impassibile.

"Che cosa avete da rispondere?" gli viene domandato dalla Corte.

"Se voi mi date del tempo io vi presentero' prove irrecusabili che quanto ho dichiarato e' il vero," ha risposto il prete." Io e lui, in Napoli, eravamo nei migliori rapporti di amicizia. I miei doveri sacerdotali mettevano me in contatto di quei peccatori che cercavano i conforti della religione quando essi si trovavana in guai. E da d'allora io divenni ben conosciuto e stimato da molti delegati ed ufficiali di polizia, fra questi incluso il signor Detilla.

NEW CONTEST LIST SUNDAY

By THE CONTEST EDITOR.

J.E. MORTON

The time is at hand toward which candidates in the AMERICAN'S $35,000 Prize Contest have been looking impatiently for the past fortnight. In the Sunday AMERICAN to-morrow, April 9, the Contest Editor will make three important announcements.

The first is the new list of candidates' standing in all districts.

The second is the names of the leaders in the open contest for the capital prize, the $8,000 house and two lots at Riverton-on-the-Charles.

Third—The name of the winner of the Buick runabout, offered as a special prize to the candidate polling the highest votes by subscription during March.

Candidates can take the Contest Editor's word for it that this new list of standings is a mighty interesting one. There are some surprises in it. For instance, the winner of the auto is ——.

On second thought, the Contest Editor guesses he will wait until to-morrow before telling anything at all. Possess yourselves in patience, all you candidates. To-morrow will soon be here, barring accidents.

"Huh!" says some candidate, "the Contest Editor thinks he is awful wise, doesn't he?"

Speaking of being wise, what is the wisest bird there is? The owl, of course. Are you an Owl? Morton is one. Who is Morton? He is J. E. Morton of Somerville, a District Two candidate. Fine name, Morton—eh, what!

Mr. Morton is an Owl because he belongs to the Order of Owls. Also he is an Odd Fellow. Lodge members in both organizations are hustling for him. He gets votes not only in Somerville, but also in Jamaica Plain and Roslindale, where he formerly lived. He is in the auditing department of the Boston Elevated Railway Company, where he has been employed for ten years.

UNHURT AS CAR SMASHES AUTO

A big touring car, owned and driven by Henry Richardson of No. 29 Harris street, Waltham, crashed through the safety gates at the Mt. Auburn street crossing of the Boston & Maine near Beacon square, Watertown, early to-day and was smashed to pieces against a moving freight train. By an almost miraculous streak of luck Richardson fell under the car, and save for a scratch or two was uninjured.

Richardson was driving from Mt. Auburn to Waltham. Mt. Auburn street slopes in a long grade almost directly to the railroad crossing. According to the Watertown police, Richardson took the slope at a high speed and, not seeing the lowered gates, had nearly reached the tracks before he applied the brakes.

The car smashed the gates as if they had been matches. Then it crashed into a freight car, which moving rapidly, cast it back and to one side of the tracks. Members of the train crew heard the crash, but were not aware of what had happened and the train swept on toward Boston without stopping.

SPRING SAP TAP BRINGS MISHAP

"Ah, ah! Spring is here," said Myron L. Murdock of Kingsbury street, Wellesley, "and I will tap yon maple tree."

Mr. Murdock with tin pail in hand advanced threateningly toward a tall young maple tree which stood in front of his house and tap the tree he did, and the sap began to run.

Along came Churchill Adams, the famous tree-warden sleuth of Wellesley. He saw the maple tree; he saw the running sap.

"You're pinched," he said to Murdock. "The tree belongs to the town of Wellesley."

"You are in the wrong house," said Murdock. "The tree belongs to me."

The case came up in the Dedham District Court.

"I did tap the tree," said Murdock to the court. "Maple syrup is good for the health."

"Guilty!" said the judge, who placed the case on file.

MISS TURNBULL RETURNS HOME

Miss Beatrice Anita Turnbull, who recently failed in her attempt, through her mother, Mrs. Lillian Ashley Turnbull, to get a daughter's share of the millions left by the late E. J. (Lucky) Baldwin, in a fight in the Los Angeles courts, caused the Brookline police some trouble through a report that reached them that the girl had mysteriously disappeared from her home in that town. Later the police were informed that the girl had returned home.

Miss Turnbull is a pretty girl of eighteen. She lives with her mother, now the wife of Dr. William D. Turnbull of No. 221 Harvard street, Brookline.

There had been many reports at the time of the trial in Los Angeles that attempts had been made to carry the girl off—presumably so that she could not prosecute her suit to establish that she was the daughter of the wealthy Californian.

So when a man, purporting to be the stepfather of the girl, called up the Brookline police and reported that the girl was missing, the police began a search for her.

When a reporter called up the Turnbull home and asked about the disappearance of Miss Turnbull to-day a voice replied:

"She is home. She called us and said that she had been with her music teacher and that we were not to be alarmed. As a matter of fact we knew she was at the home of her music teacher, a woman of whom she is very fond."

"But didn't you 'phone the police last night that she was lost?"

"No, that must have been some one else. We knew where she was."

The man who called up the police gave a description of the girl that is correct. He said that she was about eighteen, tall, slender, wore a brown hat and a brown suit trimmed with fur. The police were told, when they communicated with the family, that the girl was at home.

FRITZI SCHEFF'S PLAY SUDDENLY TAKEN OFF

It was suddenly determined to close the Boston engagement of Fritzi Scheff in the new Victor Herbert compic opera at the Shubert Theatre with the Saturday performance. The attraction will open in Philadelphia after Holy Week, and in the meantime rehearsals will be in progress in New York. Victor Herbert has written several important new numbers for the opera. De Wolf Hopper in "A Matinee Idol" will begin a two weeks' engagement at the Shubert on Monday evening, April 17.

MISS SLATER, WHO CHARGES SPITE IN AUTO RACE ARREST

MISS ESTHER SLATER.

ARREST VEXES SLATER HEIRESS

Miss Esther Slater, heiress of the Slater millions, who will be charged in the Quincy Police Court Tuesday with breaking the speed laws in a fifty-mile-an-hour automobile dash through the Canton section, declared to-day that her arrest by William Fallon, the Milton automobile sleuth, was a "case of spite."

It is expected that the spirited young woman will tell the court what she thinks of Fallon, the flying chauffeur-detective of the Milton police force.

Miss Slater was arrested after a four-mile chase near the Canton cemetery. With her was a young man friend and the chauffeur. Miss Slater was running her car.

"Fallon got me," said Miss Slater, "but the fact is he was after my brother, whom he has been trying to catch for a long time. He can't do it. He has made a bet of $3,000 that he will catch my brother and he thought my car was his.

"If I had known it was Fallon who was after me I should not have driven so fast. I was just tuning up the car, a 50-horsepower one that is capable of making eighty-four miles an hour. I would not have thought of running forty-five or fifty miles an hour in the city, of course. But we were away out in the country on a lonely road.

"I did not know who it was behind me until he shot ahead and stopped me. He hates us anyway and enjoys annoying us. He would not believe it was my car, and not my brother's, for some time.

"I was not doing any harm and it was a case of spite, anyway. We had a clear road, with nobody in sight.

"This is the second time Fallon has got me in my car, the other time being three years ago. But he'll not get my brother."

Fallon was out warming up the new Milton police automobile, which is guaranteed to make ninety miles an hour. He saw the Slater car in the distance and drove into a side road in Canton to wait for it to pass. Then he speeded his machine up to fifty miles an hour and gave chase for four miles.

SAWYER LEAVES FOR MONTREAL

Henry N. Sawyer, Jr., whose spectacular operations in Bay State Gas sent that stock skittering up to forty and caused the greatest commotion in the curb market, has fled to Montreal, according to his wife. Half a dozen curb brokers through whom he placed his orders for 100,000 shares of the stock are out large sums of money, and many persons who were attracted to the buying end before the price broke are bewailing their losses.

Thomas W. Lawson, with whose name the erratic young clubman is said to have attempted to conjure, denies flatly that he knows Sawyer or was in any way concerned in the coup that failed.

This significant draft was received at the offices of Eichhorn & Crowell, the brokers to whom young Sawyer had given most of his buying orders:

"Do not deposit draft until you see me to-morrow."

Broker Hurries to Canaan.

It was signed Henry N. Sawyer, Jr., and on its receipt Herbert B. Eichhorn made a hasty trip to Canaan, N. H., where the Sawyers have a country estate.

"My husband came home about midnight," Mrs. Sawyer told the broker. "He was terribly excited and kept exclaiming, 'I'm all in on Bay State Gas and I'm going to beat it to Montreal.' He acted queerly and seemed very much worried.

"He changed his mind several times, first saying that he would be driven to the station, then that he wouldn't go to Canada at all and then that he would walk to the station. He has done these peculiar things before and I am sure that this latest attempt was made only in fun. If he had been looking for money he would have mapped out a campaign covering several days rather than take four big brokerage houses into camp at once.

"I may hear from him to-night or to-morrow or not for several weeks, but at any event I do not expect to hear from him until this peculiar spell of his is over."

Boarded Canadian Train.

From other sources it was learned that Sawyer took a late train from Boston on the night of his theatric operations. Brokers who had been dealing at his orders sought him about town in order to assure themselves that he would appear the next morning and produce the $30,000 that his orders represented, or its equivalent in stock. While they were searching for him he was hurrying to Canaan.

Sawyer's train was late, and he did not reach his station until after midnight. He engaged a carriage to drive him to his home and told the driver to come back for him in time for the 4:20 a. m. train to Boston. Later he telephoned the owner of the livery stable not to send for him, and he walked the three miles to the station. He rode as far as Franklin, and then took a train for Franklin Falls, where he boarded the Canadian train about 6 o'clock.

Henry N. Sawyer, Jr., was known in the "street" and about town as a man of some resources. His father is the senior member of the printing house of Nathan A. Sawyer & Co. of No. 41 Pearl street, which his grandfather founded, and young Sawyer was connected with the firm. The house does a large amount of printing for brokers and the young man, who is now about thirty-five, has long had the "run of the street."

TOM L. JOHNSON IS NEAR DEATH TO-DAY

CLEVELAND, April 8.—"Farewell, I am through talking," spoken to his wife, son and daughter, may be the last words of Tom L. Johnson, who is to-day reported to be very low. The members of the family have remained close to the sick room ever since.

MISS VINING TO QUIT AS EDITOR

Editor Floretta Vining of Hull, the "busiest newspaper woman" and political boss of the South Shore, is planning to sell her nine South Shore weeklies and devote herself to farming, lecturing and literature. A Republican syndicate, she says, has an option on her newspapers and will decide as to purchase on May 1. The same interests also plan to buy up other weeklies and dailies in Norfolk county.

"I leave for Washington next Friday," said Miss Vining, "to attend a convention of the Daughters of the American Revolution, of which I have been a regent for fifteen years—longer than any other regent in the United States. The option on my newspapers expires May 1, when I get back from Washington.

"For fifteen years I have been in the journalistic business, and I believe that it is the only good business in the world. I made a success of it because I am a fighter. I never sat down disheartened when things didn't go just right—I just kept on fighting.

"I may still keep tabs on the Hull, Hingham and Cohasset districts for the new owners—a stock company."

Herbert A. Tilden of Cohasset, in a letter soliciting subscriptions for stock in a projected corporation which will publish the South Shore News, covering fifteen towns in Norfolk and Plymouth counties and the city of Quincy, has declared that Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham and Senator George L. Barnes of Weymouth are back of the enterprise. The move is regarded along the South Shore as a step in the Frothingham campaign.

The Lieutenant-Governor is out of the city. Senator Barnes, who is also away, had a letter in the Weymouth Gazette, declaring that he has no other interest in the proposition than the drawing of some legal papers in connection with it.

LOWELL MARINE HELD IN MAIL THEFT CASE

PHILADELPHIA, April 8.—With ten letters which he should have delivered to the postoffice at League Island in his possession, Edward J. Perrin, mail orderly of the United States receiving ship Lancaster, was arrested by Postoffice Inspector Frank W. Smith. Included in the ten letters were two which Inspector Smith had mailed on board the ship. Perrin, who comes from Lowell, Mass., enlisted in August, 1907, and had only a few more months in the service on his first enlistment.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—There are two "Mr. Speakers" in the House of Representatives now. The title sticks to the former speaker notwithstanding his retirement. Mr. Cannon and Speaker Clark, who are on excellent terms personally, met in the corridor to-day.

"Good morning, Mr. Speaker," said Clark.

"Good morning, Mr. Speaker," returned Cannon.

Dr. White's New Hair Grower

Has grown hair on heads that were bald for years. His famous treatment has succeeded in thousands of cases.

Send for FREE Book Which Explains How

Baldness Can Be Cured

Dr. White has published a valuable book which explains all about his famous "Hair Grower." In this book Dr. White displays sectional drawings of hair magnified 600 diameters, comparing a healthy hair-tube with a diseased hair-tube, demonstrating how a simple mechanical growth or parasite forms an obstruction in the hair-tube, preventing the hair from growing beyond the surface of the scalp. Dr. White shows where this parasite or obstruction is located and how it can be removed and a luxurious growth of hair obtained.

Hair never dies in a living person. It is generally believed that in baldness when the scalp is smooth, the hair is dead. Dr. White says this is not true. If it were so, the decay would be carried to the surrounding tissues and the head would become a mass of putrefaction and the person would die of blood poisoning.

Dr. White's "Hair Grower" is a combined constitutional treatment and is fully guaranteed. Its use is based on the general health condition of the patient. Most people are inclined to eat foods which do not assimilate and which disorganize the digestion and affect the blood. Consequently, parts of the body become debilitated. Often the hair is affected and baldness results. In the use of Dr. White's treatment the patient's bodily condition is taken into consideration and treatment for the digestion, blood and scalp is given and recommended.

If you are bald-headed, or if your hair is falling out—if it is getting light-colored—finer than usual—inclined to be a little curly—splitting at the ends, showing lack of nutrition, or if you have dandruff or any other scalp trouble, you should give immediate attention to these symptoms of baldness and secure Dr. White's remedy, which is guaranteed to remove the causes of scalp troubles and grow hair.

Send for the book, which is mailed FREE, and read what Dr. White says about the Cause of Baldness and Its Cure. He is the one physician up to this time who, in our opinion, has found a real cause for baldness and the proper remedy for its cure. Send for the book to-day. It is FREE.

BOOKS AND RECORDS OF LORIMER "SLUSH" FUND DISCOVERED

CHICAGO, April 8.—Books and records of a bank, purporting to show the disposition of several deposits of $10,000 each, have been found by an agent of the State Senate Committee which is investigating the election of William Lorimer to the United States Senate.

The several deposits are said to have been made about the time the "slush" fund of $100,000 was being collected from the big trusts to effect Lorimer's election in the State Legislature.

While Lorimer was closeted with aids and lieutenants preparing to meet the developments following the revelations of Clarence S. Funk, general manager of the International Harvester Company before the Helm committee at Springfield, process servers were rounding up in Chicago the millionaires who will appear before the committee next Thursday.

Among the witnesses will be Edward Hines, president of the Hines Lumber Company named as collector of the $100,000 Lorimer fund; Cyrus H. McCormick, president of the International Harvester Company; Edward Tilden, president of the National Packing Company, mentioned as the treasurer of the fund; a prominent banker and an attorney.

The present plan is to recall Funk and let him face Hines, whom he accuses of having solicited $10,000 to help reimburse those who "Put Lorimer over."

With 125 subpoenas already served the committee is provided with work enough to last for several weeks. Senator Helm, who is at the head of the body, denied that any meetings would be held before next Thursday, the day set for Edward Tilden, who was accused by Clarence S. Funk with being the collector of the $100,000 Lorimer corruption fund, to testify. It was declared that the committee would continue long after the Legislature adjourned, so that all evidence could be heard and prepared for presentation.

Senator Lorimer was in conference during the day with Attorney Ralph Crews, representing Edward Tilden and Edward Hines, and Attorney Elbridge Hancey who has fought Lorimer's battles from the first. Before the Helm committee meets Thursday Lorimer is expected to make his last big play in Illinois to stave off defeat.

Lorimer Ready for Anything.

This was indicated by the statement of Attorney Hancey:

"I will not go to Springfield, and we will take no hand in the matter so long as this alleged investigation proceeds along its present lines of wild charges and definite denials. But if they begin going into the private affairs of Senator Lorimer we will act, and in no uncertain manner."

As the evidence to be introduced Thursday is said to be of a particular, intimate and delicate nature, the Lorimer forces may be expected to "ACT."

"I see no reason for going to Springfield or remaining in Chicago," said the Senator. "I am not alarmed and have no statement to make. I will make a final statement in this matter on the floor of the Senate. I do not know just when, but I am prepared for anything which may happen."

"Ask LaFollette what will happen in Washington," he said in answer to a question. "I have nothing to say of the personnel of the new committee or its mission. When the time comes I will meet the situation squarely."

Denial by Tilden.

Mr. Tilden disappeared, only to be found later in conference with his attorneys. Earlier he denied that he had met or intended meeting the Senator. Later at his offices it was said that Attorney Ralph Crews was handling the matter for him, in conjunction with Attorney Hancey.

"My answer to the charges now and before the committee will be short," said Mr. Tilden. "I have no knowledge of the use of any money in the election of Senator Lorimer, and have never collected any money for Mr. Hines or any one else interested in that election. I have made no attempt to hide myself, and am ready to testify at any time."

A strange sidelight is thrown on the case by the appearance of former Senator Thomas Dawson in Springfield with Tilden, Thursday. Tilden denies Dawson is his envoy, saying they met by accident. But those who have followed the case cannot forget that Dawson was the attorney who defended anyone who needed it when the Sangamon Grand Jury began its Lorimer "jackpot" investigation. He successfully defended State Senators Pemberton and Broderick, and is considered an expert in bribery defence.

To Repeat His Offer
Of March 18 in the Boston American

I have been so moved the past few weeks by the gratitude of readers that I have decided to make again the offer which I made in the March 18 issue. This is what I said:

"I am going to Give Away a Free Trial Treatment for Deafness to every sufferer who asks for it."

People in the hundreds have come to my office and letters of request have poured in, letters of grateful thanks have also poured in. From every part of the continent the people whom I have cured of that terrible affliction—Deafness—are thanking me.

A letter from Boston says: "Allow me to thank you a thousand times for the good hearing you have restored to me." A letter from Chicago says: "I bless the day I saw your offer, for you have cured me of Deafness."

Deafness Treatment Free

These many letters of gratitude have touched my heart, and so I say again to the readers of the American: "I will give away a free trial treatment for Deafness to every sufferer who calls at my office or who writes for it."

This offer can only be made for a very short time. If you are Deaf, or have any trouble with your ears, come or write for free treatment.

This treatment is entirely free. I want to help you. I know what you suffer in the approach of Deafness and the intolerable agony of complete Deafness. I know that I have cured many, many people who were Deaf. I want you to have the same opportunity to hear again. Send now a postcard or letter request. Don't delay, or it may be too late. If you have even the slightest feeling that something is wrong with your ears, be on the safe side and send for treatment. It won't cost you anything. If you are growing Deaf, and have become discouraged and tired of experimenting, profit by the example of those who have been cured by my treatment. Many of these people thought they never could be cured, they tried so many different things which never did them any good. MY treatment restored their hearing.

Send to Dr. Edward Gardner, Suite 463, 38 West 32d st., New York City, and get the Free Trial Treatment.

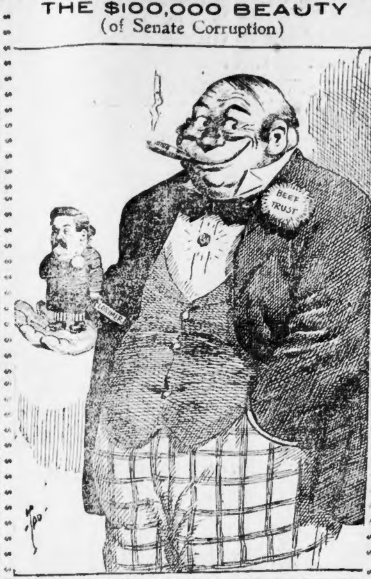
THE $100,000 BEAUTY
(of Senate Corruption)



This is Lorimer, the representative in the United States Senate of all that is corrupt in the State of Illinois. This is the man who was sent to the Senate by one hundred thousand dollars of corrupt money—as proved most reluctantly under oath by friends of the corruptionists. This is the man who was KEPT in the Senate by more trust corruption money—money taken greedily by men used to trust bribes, as proved by Standard Oil letters read by W. R. Hearst.

This is Lorimer standing in the paw of the Beef Trust, that financed him and that owns him.

This thing represents in the Senate of the United States the small corrupt minority in the State of Illinois. In view of the latest revelations, how long will it take the Senate to throw out this man? Will a few fools, a VERY few honest men deceived and a group of willing bribe takers and trust sympathizers in the Senate be able once more to keep this man a Senator and confirm the statement that the most appropriate place for a wholesale rascal is the Senate of the United States?

PALM SUNDAY WILL BE FAIR

Palm Sunday, to-morrow, will be fair and warm if the weather man is correct. He says that the fair weather in Boston will probably continue until Monday.

Twenty open cars were run on the streets of Boston yesterday, the first open cars of the year. They were quickly filled with passengers, many taking a ride just to say that they rode in one of the first open cars of the season.

The cars were run on the tracks of the Dorchester, Roxbury and Cambridge divisions.

NO SHAW GRAND JURY REPORT

The Grand Jury after its April sitting reported to Judge Stevens in the Superior Criminal Court. It did not make any report on the Shaw tax case in which the three executors of the estate of Quincy A. Shaw are accused of tax dodging. Sixty-three true bills and twenty-one no bills were reported. It is said that there is more evidence in the Shaw case to be considered.

The Grand Jury reported one true "certificate" against Ellen Josephine Ahearn, also known as Herron, who was charged with the murder of Mary Moulton, at No. 62 Hudson street, South End, March 23. It was found that she committed the offence, but it failed to indict her because she was insane at the time of the act and is so now. Mary Moulton died from blows on the head inflicted with a shovel.

Among the true bills returned is an indictment against Salvatore Cordaro, who is charged with three counts of larceny. In all he is charged with stealing $405 in bail transactions. Philip J. Hayes, who escaped from Deer Island June 30, was indicted for that offence. No bills were returned against Harold D. Jacobs and Ray H. Perkins, two chauffeurs. They were in a collision at the corner of Berkeley street and Columbus avenue March 8. One of the two autos fell upon Carmello Bonanno, who was killed. John A. Davis and Joseph Mazzarella were indicted under the "white slave" act.

HAS FIANCE PUT IN COLD STORAGE

Miss Cecilia B. Wilson, a handsome, richly-gowned woman from Hartford, Ct., visited a law firm and the police station in Lynn as soon as she got off a train and within half an hour had John White, her fiance, before Judge Sisk in the Police Court on the charge of drunkenness. At her request White was sentenced to the State Farm at Bridgewater. Miss Wilson said she wanted quick action because she was going to sail from New York for Bermuda on Monday and could not enjoy the voyage unless she knew White was in safe custody. She is anxious to reclaim him, she says.

"We have been engaged for fifteen years," Miss Wilson told the Court, "and I hope some day Mr. White will change his habits and that we can be married. I love him and will pay his expenses in the institution where he is kept, if there is no other way. He was a prosperous man once and was superintendent of a shoe factory in Brockton and had an interest in the firm. But he was an athlete and used to go around boxing and got into dissipated habits."

Judge Sisk explained he couldn't commit White to Foxboro until alienists had passed on his case, which would take some time. He sentenced him to Bridgewater. White protested. He said he ought to be given another chance. He lives on Summer street, near the Saugus line, and is well-known in Lynn.

175 LEAVE U.S. TO JOIN REBELS

DOUGLAS, Ariz., April 8.—A force of 175 heavily-armed men recruited for the Mexican insurrecto army on the United States side of the border crossed the Rio Grande into Mexico under the cover of darkness early to-day and are making a forced march to join the rebel force at Nacorita Canon, fifty miles south of Douglas.

The local junta has purchased a Curtiss biplane from Aviator Charles F. Willard, who arrived here unexpectedly from Los Angeles. A local aviator named Williams, who has been given a commission by the insurrecto army, tried out the machine. To-day it had disappeared. It is believed to have been shipped over the border during the night. The aeroplane will be used in the campaign against Chihuahua. According to the program Williams is to soar over the city.

"On to Mexico City" has become the war cry of the insurrectos. In an important conference held here to-day at the Queen hotel the provisional governors of the Mexican states of Sonora and Chihuahua outlined plans for the most aggressive campaign yet undertaken. They plan to recruit a big force and sweep south to Mexico City. Prominent residents of Hermosillo, Arizpe, Ures, Guaymas, Chihuahua, Torreon and Juarez have pledged financial support.

The revolutionists attacked Valardena yesterday and succeeded in cutting off railroad connections with Durango. The Federal troops had little difficulty in repelling the attack. There were few casualties.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—The State Department was advised to-day that George W. Critchfield, the New Jersey Mining engineer who was shot from ambush in Mexico, died Friday. United States Consul Miller at Tampico reports he will proceed immediately to Tuxton to investigate the shooting.

MUTT AND JEFF GIVEN THE HOOK

A lively cheering contest between the admirers of Peter Dooley's laughing song and Salome dance and those who liked Marion Healy's dainty singing featured the prize awards at the Columbia amateur performance last night. After the Dooley rooters had yelled themselves hoarse Marion's friends got in their work with such telling effect that the referee split the purse. A black Mutt and Jeff was one of the features, and while they looked the part as far as size went, the resemblance stopped right there, and they offered a splendid target for the large corps of gentle slap-stick, bladder and hook practical jokers. It was a hilarious hour which everybody enjoyed, even the crayon artist, who made good grease drawings of "Teddy" and others, but failed to get within the money, second prize going to Jack Dalton, a youthful violin player.

COWBOY BY BOSTON MAN IN PARIS SALON

Hunt Diedrich's cowboy is mounted on a broncho and is in the act of lassoing a refractory beast. Diedrich, who is only twenty-four years old, has been praised by the jury for seeking inspiration in the virgin West.

$100,000 FIRE IN NEW HAVEN

NEW HAVEN, April 8.—Fire that broke out early to-day destroyed the five-story building in Chestnut street, near Webster, formerly occupied by the Killam Carriage Company and owned by Lewis Hawthorne, a cabinet worker. The Killam building is a complete ruin and the adjoining houses were threatened with a like doom. All the structures surrounding the burned building are of frame construction. The loss is at least $100,000, partly covered by insurance.

An alarm of fire was sent in shortly before 3 a. m., and this was almost immediately followed by a second and third alarm.

The building in which the fire started is a five-story brick structure and was occupied by several firms, among them being the cabinet and stair building firm of the owner of the building, Lewis Hawthorne; Louis Rempfer, stair builder; Charles Griener, a machine shop; C. H. Blake Co., and the John T. Doyle Company, manufacturers of Country Club catsup and other articles of that nature.

RAFT OF GOOD SCHOOL GAMES

A dozen good school baseball games are on the schedule for to-day, weather permitting. The season was to have started in full swing on Wednesday, but the rain forced the players under cover.

Dorchester High and Medford High meet in the best game of the day at Dorchester. Both schools have good teams and the rivalry is close. Dorchester High has one of the best teams that has represented the school for several seasons, and Coach O'Reilly has all his men in the best shape to start the season.

O'Really has been working with three twirlers and he is satisfied that he has turned out one find in Paul Benson.

Medford, captained by Early, looks to be stronger than in the past seasons. The school has two good pitchers, Joe Fahey and Davidson. Both are veterans and have already established a fine record.

Boston English High inaugurates the season out in Wakefield, playing the high school of that town. The English High team is composed of new men but they are fast and may spring a surprise.

Wakefield expects to have one of the strongest teams at the school for several seasons. The team is captained by Young, who plays third base. The battery work will be done by McKie brothers, who worked last season.

Malden High plays the Tech freshmen on its home grounds. Malden High has lost Wescott, one of its star players, and his loss means quite a little.

Arlington High opens its season this afternoon on its home grounds with the Lexington High team, Somerville High plays the Northwestern semi-professional, Waltham High plays Concord High at Waltham, Wellesley High clashes with the Hopkinton High School at Wellesley, Everett High plays its alumni at Everett, Beverly High plays the Dane Street team at Beverly, Dean Academy battles with the Worcester South High at Franklin, Peabody High and Saugus plays at Peabody and Rindge Manual Training School clashes with the Lowell High School at Lowell.

BIG DAY FOR COLLEGE NINES

Nearly all the big colleges will get in a baseball game to-day. Several of the universities have had their teams down South for the past two weeks, and they have been playing there, but to-day the colleges will play right in our midst.

Harvard is the only college that has not as yet got in a real game, but will open on Tuesday with the Red Sox on the Huntington avenue grounds.

Yale plays the New York Giants on the Polo Grounds, New York, this afternoon, and Princeton plays the New York Highlanders second team, also in New York. It is a strong fad for the big colleges to play professional teams, and in a couple of years it may develop that series of games will be arranged.

Dartmouth plays Georgetown University at Washington, Annapolis plays Penn State at Annapolis, and West Point plays Lehigh at West Point.

Brown opens its home season at Providence with Trinity and Tufts opens at Medford with an All-Star team from Everett. Cornell plays Baltimore, Eastern League team at Washington.

LYNCH SAYS IT'S A JOKE.

NEW YORK, April 8.—"Ridiculous," was the answer of President Thomas Lynch of the National League to the charge made by the Rev. P. R. Miller at Saratoga that baseball interests have raised $250,000 to secure the passage of a Sunday baseball bill. "The whole thing is a joke," said Mr. Lynch. "Why, the New York clubs don't want Sunday baseball. They feel that the people of the State do not want it."

I Was A Heavy Drinker

Consumed Quart of Whisky Daily.

CURED IN 72 HOURS

If you know anyone who drinks alcohol in any form, regularly or periodically, let me send my FREE book, "Confessions of an Alcohol Slave." It reveals something important, explains how you can quickly cure a drinker.

I drank beer at first, then gradually developed into a drinker of strong liquors. When drinking heavily, I wouldn't hesitate to pawn my coat or break a saloon window to get spirits. For long periods I would drink over a quart of whisky, rum or gin daily—with some mixed drinks and beer additionally! I went from bad to worse.

I damaged business, health and social opportunities, made my family miserable, lost real friends and became an unworthy, unwelcome burden upon all except the saloonkeepers, who cheerfully took my money for the poison they gave me. Alcoholism is terrible!

For 16 years I kept it up, and I was regarded as a hopeless case. Various "cures" did me no good. But now I have a joyous message for drinkers and their

Mothers, Wives, Sisters

While drifting from bad to worse, as all slaves of King Alcohol do, I unexpectedly found a true cure. It was (and is) genuine. It saved my life. My health was quickly restored. I became and am a respectable man, enjoying every benefit of freedom from the accursed alcohol. I speedily and naturally lost all desire for drink. The craving for liquor ceased: I could sleep perfectly, my stomach became well—I recovered from rheumatism and other ailments which I now know were due to my indulgence in strong drink.

Wonderful Cure for Drink Habit

My cure took 3 days: If I had relied upon will power or faith I would still be a drunkard, because an alcohol slave has no will power while drinking. I rejoiced so greatly at having found a true cure that I decided to devote my life to removing the curse from others. My success has been marvelous. During eight years I have supplied the Treatment to many thousands of men and women who were addicted to drink; the list includes very many persons notable in all walks of life, including those of brains and those of physical energy. If I were permitted to mention names of those who have been saved through this quick, permanent cure the public would be astonished. They include public officials, great lawyers, bankers, clergymen, noted merchants, skilled mechanics, trusted managers and clerks, farmers and others in all vocations. I tell about the secret in my book, which I send FREE to every person (or relative or friend) who takes alcohol in any form to excess. My one purpose in life is to cure the drunkard. I rejoice in every cure, each victim has my sympathy.

FREE

What I promise is absolutely guaranteed. My remedy is for steady or periodical drinkers. Think of it — a complete and permanent home cure between Friday night and Monday night — or any other 72 hours! I also supply a reliable Treatment which cures drinkers without their knowledge. It is the genuine secret method. Do please let me send you particulars.

Men and Women, Any Age, Quickly Cured to stay Cured. Three Days—That's All.

To relatives, friends or employers I say—if you want to cure a drinker in the quickest time and permanently, with or without his knowledge and with absolute safety, read my book—it changes despair to joy.

Alcoholism Cured With or Without Drinker's Knowledge

I will send you my book, in plain wrapper, promptly, postpaid. It tells of my own career and the wonderful discovery and gives valuable advice. No other book like it. With the free book I will mail you a legion of testimonials, including medical endorsements, with names and addresses to prove what I say. I especially appeal to those who have wasted money on treatments and remedies which have no lasting effect. My book costs you nothing and you will always be glad that you wrote. SUCCESS GUARANTEED. Correspondence strictly confidential. Mention whether person is willing to be cured, or if you need to cure him of drink habit without his knowledge. Cut this out if you cannot write to-day.

EDWARD J. WOODS, 534 Sixth Ave., 327, New York, N.Y.

NOTE.—Mr. Woods' Method is safe and genuine. It does all he claims and he proves it. Every reader who wants to banish the drink habit forever, with person's knowledge, or secretly, should write for this free book.

BOXERS ENTER AMATEUR BOUTS

That the National amateur boxing championships to be held in Mechanics Building next Monday and Tuesday evenings will be the largest attended amateur tournament of the kind ever held in Boston is evident. The supply of tickets is nearly exhausted.

Joe Burke of Jamaica Plain, entered in the heavyweight class, is having some trouble with the registration committee over a trivial matter. John Muntee, 115-pound boxer, has not entered, as he is going to become a professional. All the New England champions have entered.

It is a disappointment that Champion Warren Barbour did not enter in the heavyweight class to defend the title, as the local fans believe that Serino, who boxes under the name of Rino, would have given him a hard tussle. The New York and Canadian boxers entered have good records and the New England champions will have to display some good skill to win from them, if they happen to meet.

Dr. Bingen is by Bingen, 2:06¼, and Minnie Wilkes is by Red Wilkes. Mr. Fickett also has his gentleman's driver, Sunshine, at Readville to be sold. Albert Gray, the veteran trainer, is with three horses and will have charge of them during the Summer.

RINGSIDE RHYMES

The Single Punch

By DAMON RUNYON

HE keeps his right hand loaded an' cocked, an' it sings like a four-inch shell
Whenever he shoots it up from his shoes, an' it carries a chloroform smell;
Me seconds they say, "you cover an' stall," so I bundles myself in a bunch—
But wot kin you do wit' a murderous guy who'll knock you dead wit' a punch?

I COVER my face, an' peek t'rew me gloves, an' I see him let go wit' pain,
Because I'm scart whenever he lands he'll drive his hands t'rew me brain;
An' me seconds they bawl, "Stay wit' him, you kid, an' put yer left in his lunch"—
But I know if ever I open up he'll knock me dead wit' a punch!

THEY tell you he hasn't got anything else; it's as big as a house when he leads,
But it travels as fast as a ten-dollar bill, an' believe me, it's all he needs;
They tell me to stand an' trade him a few — I'm sorry that ain't my hunch—
For I haven't got nothin' to swap wit' a guy who kin knock me dead wit' a punch!

SO he teetors his right like a blacksmith's sledge, an' he swings like the barnyard gate,
But any ole time that he sets it fair, the crowd don't have to wait;
It's all he's got—well, it's all he needs, so I keeps wrapped up in a bunch—
That's the only system to stick wit' a guy who kin knock you dead wit' a punch!

LANGFORD ON WAY HOME TO SEE FATHER

LONDON, April 8.—Sam Langford, the negro pugilist, sailed for America on the Lusitania to-day following receipt of a cable last night that his father is seriously ill in Nova Scotia. Langford will return here the first week in May to make ready for several fights scheduled for him in London and Paris.

Boxing Results at Many Clubs

BUFFALO.—Jack ("Twin") Sullivan made a veritable punching bag of Jack Alton, announced as the champion of the navy, in a bout scheduled for ten rounds here, and although the Twin hit his opponent a couple of hundred times and had his face puffed and bleeding, the bald-headed veteran wasn't able to drop the sailor, much less knock him out.

RACINE, Wis.—Packey McFarland of Chicago defeated Morris Bloom in the eighth round of their bout here. After the fight, Manager Jones announced that Wolgast would concede five pounds to McFarland in order to get him on for forty-five rounds to settle the title. Bloom, who has been touted as the coming champion, was far from McFarland's calibre.

BROOKLYN.—Battling Bill Hurley of Passaic and Cy Smith of Hoboken, two of the greatest sluggers in the lightweight division, went ten fast and exciting rounds at the Whirlwind A. C., resulting in a victory for Hurley. The Passaic boy earned the honors in practically every round, but he had no chance to let up in his work, as Smith took all the punishment without backing up and then came back for more.

PHILADELPHIA.—There was something doing all the time at the Nonpareil A. C. The final bout, in which Harry Ramsey and Farmer Harris quarrelled, was one of the slam-bang order. Ramsey won by a shade, but it took all the energy for him to do it. Harris had the better of the second and third rounds, while Ramsey was the gainer of the others.

BALTIMORE.—John Dohan of New York gave Joe Seiger a good lacing in six rounds before the Eureka A. C. Soldier Burns of this city made Al Schumacher of New York look like a novice after six rounds of fighting.

TULSA, Okla.—Jim Barry, the Chicago heavyweight, knocked out Jack Heinan of Chicago in the fourth round of their fight here.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo.—Rudolph Unholz, the Boer lightweight, was knocked out in the third round of a scheduled fifteen-round bout by Tommy Moore of Chicago here.

TO-NIGHT'S BOUTS.

Willie Lewis vs. George Gunther, Paris.

Paddy Lavin vs. Young Ott, Rochester, N. Y.

Frankie Madole vs. Harry Trendall, Pittsburg.

Kid Mercier vs. Johnny Stewart, Bangor, Me.

Sailor Burke vs. Montana Dan Sullivan, New York.

KEEN RIVALRY IN DOG SHOW

The bench show committee of the New England Kennel Club, Messrs. Henry S. Blake, James L. Little, Charles H. Taylor, Jr., Richard C. Storey and Eugene V. R. Thayer, announce that everything will be in readiness for the opening of the best dog show Boston has had in many years, to be held in Mechanics Building April 11, 12 and 13.

There are over 1,200 entries and dogs are coming from all over the country. Among the prominent exhibitors are Thomas W. Lawson, who has entered a string of the Dreamwold dogs. Mrs. A. Henry Higginson has made a large entry of her crack fox terriers and West Highland white terriers. Prescott Wolcott will show the sensational Airedale terrier, Kenmare Sorceress, that swept the boards in her classes at New York.

The keen rivalry in Irish terriers seen at New York will be transferred to Boston, for J. L. Thorndike will have on the boards Champion Thornecroft Sportsman and his son, Thornecroft Marksman, the latter being the winner at New York. The imported dog, Blarney Authority, owned by J. G. Bates of New Jersey, is coming on to try conclusions with the best of them.

The English setter entry is better than for some years. "Ben" Lewis is coming with his string from Pennsylvania, and C. H. Taylor of Boston, leads the list in number of entries, including Champion Blue Prince, the fifteen-months-old Blue Boy, that won the special at Haverhill for best bred by exhibitor of any breed; also Yarrow Girl and Willow Girl, both prize winners.

There is a good entry of pointers, including R. C. McQuillen's Belle V.

Judging will begin at 10 a. m. on Tuesday, with Mr. Oldham taking bloodhounds and foxhounds; Mr. Johnson, Airedale terriers; Dr. De Munde, Great Danes, and Mr. Lacy, harriers and Irish setters. In the afternoon Mr. Chase will take English setters; Mr. Baker, fox terriers, and Dr. Dwight, collies.

Tuesday evening Mr. Mulcahy will start on the Boston terriers. Beagles will go on the boards Wednesday morning and in the afternoon Mr. Frothingham will judge bull terriers. Other breeds will be put on as opportunity offers. The show will open at 10 a. m. Tuesday, and will continue from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. Wednesday and Thursday.

ADDIE JOSS SICK AND OUT OF GAME

TOLEDO, O., April 8.—Addie Joss, the star twirler of the Cleveland Naps, is quite a sick man at his home. Whether his illness, which caused him to fall in a faint at Chattanooga, in a case of ptomaine poisoning or a slight attack of nervous indigestion Joss is unable to say. Whatever the illness is, it has made its presence felt and Ad is surprisingly thin. He says he has parted with most of the lost weight in the last few days. The sickness has weakened the flinger and even though his arm were in working condition, he would not be able to do any slab toil for some time.

CRACK PITCHER AT HARVARD LAID OFF

There is no chance of Sam Felton pitching for the Harvard baseball team this Spring, owing to his failure to lift the scholarship ban. Felton is the best pitcher in college, and it was hoped he would be able to stay off probation and be the Crimson's mainstay in the box.

With Felton out of consideration, Coach Sexton will have a hard time developing a pitcher of varsity standard. There is very little to choose between E. S. Ernst, the southpaw; Sexton and Hardy, who appear to be the best of the candidates.

ROBERT JORDAN'S DOG A WINNER

Boston carried off the honors at the Chicago dog show with the Airedale terriers, Robert Jordan's Mistress Magnet from the Larchmere kennels, owned by Mr. Jordan, took winners and then repeated by defeating one of the best Airedales in the country, Tinturn Royalist, for the best Airedale in the show.

BURNS VS. HOUCK.

NEW HAVEN, April 8.—Frankie Burns and Tommy Houck will be the principals in the next show of the Glee Club in this city on April 24, with Bunny Ford and Charley Griffin appearing in the semi-final, both bouts being of fifteen rounds. Dave Fitzgerald has been agreed upon as referee and will also officiate in the Broadway A. C. bouts at Waterbury May 4.

Sports of All Sorts

By Riley

THIS BASEBALL SPORT IS GETTING to be a mighty big affair. Nearly 400 players will begin drawing salaries from the sixteen major league clubs on April 12, and it is estimated that before the pennant races end the magnates will have paid out more than $800,000 for services rendered. It is conceded by well-posted baseball men that the players in the National and the American Leagues will receive more money for their labors than ever before in the history of the national game. There is no salary limit in vogue and the stipends range all the way from $1,500 to nearly ten times that amount.

* * *

THERE WAS A NOTICEABLE AIR OF contentment around the Hayward alleys all of yesterday. Happening along, I inquired the cause of so much hilarity. "Why," said one of the bowlers, "haven't you heard how Pike's Specials defeated Charles Hedge's Old South team, and did it in right proper shape. But not only that, but Pike's All Stars went up to Worcester and brought home the dough by laying it into Sharrott's crack five, and rolled a total of 1,502." This was enough for me, and I made a quick getaway, leaving Harv—never matter who—steadily talking and laughing.

* * *

I NOTE THAT THE NEW BEDFORD A. C. reopens next Monday night with a good card, in fact, the same one that was postponed a short time since. For the main bout Jerry Gaines mixes it up with Billy Farlow of Fall River, the distance being twelve rounds. There is quite a gathering of Boston and Cambridge sports going down to see how Jerry hands it out. The remainder of the card is Young Wolgast vs. T. Walker and Chicken Roskins vs. Roy Barry, the two latter bouts being for eight rounds.

* * *

THERE IS NO BETTER JUDGE OF the light harness horse in the country than Dr. A. H. Fitch of this city. That this is the opinion generally is attested by the fact that next month he will do the judging of this class of equines at the Ottawa Horse Show.

* * *

GREAT LIST OF ENTRIES FOR THE amateur boxing show next week. White Lopes without number, and I see Steve O'Donnell has a champion in the heavyweight class. The last part of his name looks like the goods.

* * *

GREAT BUNCH OF GAMES ON THE card for to-day. All the big leaguers, colleges and schools are right in the swim, but where is fair Harvard.

CICOTTE, OF RED SOX, DEVELOPS NEW CURVE

By MERTON E. BURKE.

American Correspondent with the Red Sox.

MERTON, E. BURKE

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 8.—Eddie Cicotte has developed a new curve. It is the variation of his famous "knuckle ball" and is a bird. He calls it the "aeroplane." The old time stars and the bush leaguers of the St. Joe team went up against it at that place yesterday and eight of them fanned while only three landed hits. I guess that "aeroplane" stuff is some curve. Cicotte's knuckle ball has become famous wherever baseball is played. He thinks he has improved upon it a little this year.

Sensation of Year.

His "aeroplane" curve is something like the knuckle. It starts off straight from the shoulder, without whirling. Just before it reaches the plate is gives a naughty little wiggle and then speeds on. That little wiggle gave Cicotte the idea for the name. He says the ball skims along like a monoplane then voloplanes a bit and glides over the plate.

Eddie has been reading the news of the aviators, I think. However, there are the figures, eight strike outs, three hits, no runs. That also totals for the two games he has pitched on the homeward trip eighteen shut-out innings, five hits and twenty-four strike-outs. Cicotte looks like the league leader. He will be the sensation of the year.

After this bit of press agent work I'll turn to the movements of the Red Sox. After arrival at the Coates House last night the Regular's squad inspected Kansas City on the Kaw, approved of what they saw, and will cheerfully go out this afternoon to beat the Kansas City team at baseball.

Joe Wood, who lives in these parts, and is quite some punkins hereabouts, will show off in the box.

To-day is expected to draw a big crowd, and to-morrow a record gathering for the tour is in order. That winds up the training trip. After that nothing but sure-enough league ball for the Regulars.

Mahoney a Star.

In the closing St. Joseph game the hitting of Hooper, Mahoney and Madden were the features. The more I see of Mahoney the more convinced I am that President Taylor will make a mistake if he releases him. Mahoney is one of the few finds on this trip. He's a star. Perhaps he needs a little coaching and seasoning, but it won't take many games to put him up at the top of the list for headwork, on bases and batting.

Yesterday he lined out a single, two bagger and a triple. Hooper landed on four singles. Madden contributed two singles and a double. Bradley, who is keeping cheerful under the strain of his injured knee contributes the following:

"What makes sky so blue?" said little Willie to his pa. "Watching the Red Sox Colts play ball," replied pa.

Cicotte offers one league ball in excellent condition for every suggestion for a better name for his new curve. Address—Boston. Try him.

Weather Missourienne.

Colts Cannot Play.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., April 8.—Cold weather and wet grounds combined to prevent the Red Sox Colts from meeting the Western League champions, this being the third dissapointment in four days for Carrigan's charges. The Red Sox party left here at 7:30 last night for Omaha, where games are scheduled for Friday and Sunday, the final contests of the tour of the northern division.

Treasurer McBreen will leave Omaha a day ahead of the Colts to arrange for the departure of the team for Boston, as it will be a close connection to make the Eastern jump, even if the train arrives in Chicago on time.

McBreen received a telegram from Manager Donovan, asking him to send Kleinow to Kansas City to join the Regulars, provided Carrigan is able to catch, but Captain Bill has not yet entirely recovered from his injury. Kleinow will be kept with the Colts until after the Omaha games.

JAY GOULD PLAYS CRANE FOR TITLE

Jay Gould of New York, champion, and Joshua Crane of Boston, former champion, meet this afternoon at the Tennis and Racquet Club to decide who shall hold the national court tennis championship title for 1911.

The match is expected to be a hard struggle, and some great playing will be seen when the two players step into the court. There is a gerat deal of interest in this match as well as speculation. Many believe Mr. Gould will have no trouble in winning, while there are not a few who are backing on Mr. Crane's being able to regain his title.

CROUSE-NELSON BOUT AT ARMORY IS OFF

Ted Nelson of Australia, who was to meet Buck Crouse in one of the twelve-round bouts at the Armory A. A. next Wednesday night, had an accident in New York yesterday, and the club was forced to call off the match. As it was hard to get anyone else to meet Crouse, the club has matched Al Delmont and Monte Attell to box twelve rounds instead. Attell has never been seen in this city, but his bouts with Jimmy Walsh make him look good to the fans.

FIRST GAME APRIL 19.

The Newton Y. M. C. A. baseball season will be opened at Newton April 19 against the Brown Class of Somerville. Last year the team, one of the strongest Y. M. C. A. nines in this vicinity, defeated all of the best Y. M. C. A. teams. A good schedule is being arranged and the prospects are bright.

BASEBALL NEWS NOTES

In a Colorado town there is a baseball team composed of preachers. And it doesn't take up a collection between innings, either.

Hughey Jennings declares that Manager McGraw is "a very much maligned person." McGraw sometimes thinks that way himself.

If next Tuesday is as warm and sunny as yesterday was, do you think you will make your first Spring appearance at the Huntington avenue grounds?

The Quincy (Ill.) club paid $2,500 for release from the Central League so that it might enter the Three I League, but Waterloo froze out the Quincy Club, and now Quincy has no affiliation with any league. Like swapping horses while crossing a stream.

Umpire Jack Sheridan has some stage celebrities beaten at the retirement game. After quitting baseball several times Jack has turned up again as one of the American League notable "arbitrators," and fandom will again welcome his return. Ban Johnson's latest acquisition to his umpire staff is Mullin, who officiated in the Western Association last season and earned the right to be promoted to the major league.

Neither Washington nor Detroit has a recruit who will supplant a veteran player. Detroit, however, does not need much strengthening, while Washington could improve most any of its positions.

The passing of Harry Steinfeldt to a minor league leaves the Chicago Nationals' third base open for competition between Heiny Zimmerman and Doyle. They are running toe to toe in the race for the position, although Zimmerman probably outclasses Doyle with the bat.

Cleveland has remote hope of regaining the services of Pitcher Joss, who injured his arm last season, and which has failed to respond to treatment. Without Joss the Clevelands would be like the Giants minus Mathewson.

Cy Young has requested Manager McGuire to permit him to pitch the opening championship game of the season. Young's trial against Cincinnati does not indicate that he will have his request granted.

Jim Vaughn seems to be the ripest of the Yankee pitchers, and he probably will draw the assignment to pitch against the Athletics in the curtain raiser next week in Philadelphia.

NEW CATCHER FOR RUSTLERS

By R. W. LARDNER.

American Correspondent with Rustlers on Southern Tour.

R. W. LARDNER.

LYNCHBURG, Va., April 8.—The Boston Nationals strengthened their catching department by a deal ratified by Manager Tenney late last night whereby Catcher Bridges of the Montreal club will join the Boston team at Baltimore to-morrow. Bridges was with the Chicago White Sox last year and two years ago played at Northampton, Mass. As part of the deal Pitcher Billy Burke is sold to the Montreal club on an optional purchase agreement.

Manager Tenney announced last night that the Regulars and Yanigans, after reaching Boston on Tuesday night from New Haven and Lynn respectively, would be lodged at the Hotel Thorndike. They will be the guests of the club until Wednesday, when the season actually opens.

Leave Virginia To-night.

The Boston Rustlers will say farewell to the green fields and blue mountains of Virginia after one more encounter with the Lynchburg Shoemakers. The latter put up such a nice argument yesterday, when they were beaten 2 to 0 by the Bostonians, that it was reasonable to suppose a goodly crowd would be on hand for the final 1911 appearance of Tenney's Terriers in the South.

After to-day's game, in which George Tyler was expected to pitch, the Rustlers will have a long evening of loafing, for the train for Baltimore doesn't pull out until after midnight.

Lynchburg's ball park is a thing of beauty. That is, the surroundings are fair to look upon. The park itself is nothing more than the fair grounds and the playing field hasn't much on others in this neck of the woods. But when one grows tired of watching the demon athletes capering hither and thither he may rest his lamps on the Blue Ridge, which forms a nice background for the outfield, although it is really a dozen miles away.

Otis Stockdale is manager of the Shoemakers. Anyone with any sort of memory will recall Otis. He pitched for Noah's team in the Ark League several hundred years B. C. He was drafted by Solomon and alternated with Methuselah in the box under Sol's management. He came to this country with Columbus and has pastimed in every country between East Gloucester and San Bernardino since.

Stockdale Is Just Forty.

In the year of grace, 1895, Stockdale was a member of the pitching staff of the Boston Nationals and just previous to that he was with the Washington Senators in the National League. Recently he has been pitching in the Southern Association and this is his first year as manager at Lynchburg. He announced last night that he was almost forty years old. If he is, Manager Tenney ought to be wearing kilts.

Another old-timer in this city is Smiling Al Orth. Al has no pitching arm left, and he is selling cigars right across the street from the hotel at which the Rustlers are stopping. His place of business was invaded by the athletes last night and Al had a lot of fanning to do.

The Yanigans are over at Roanoke playing Frank Shaughnessy's club and exhibiting Jack Spratt. The party was in charge of Peaches Graham when it left here, but Billy Hamilton was to take the reins and drive it back to Lynchburg in time to grab the train for Baltimore.

The Shoemakers gave us all we were looking for in yesterday's engagement. To account for the Rustler's weak hitting several theories are advanced. One of them is the loss of sleep night before last on the road from Norfolk here. Another is that the bull sign in left field was lying flat on the ground and there was nothing for the hitter to aim at. The bull heard that Doc Miller and Scotty Ingerton were coming and decided to sit down before he got knocked down.

Matty vs. Rucker.

Brooklyn played the local team day before yesterday and trimmed it, 8 to 1. Rucker worked part of the game for the Dodgers. Mattern pitched yesterday. This is a coincidence or a near one, for Matty and Nap are likely to face each other at Boston next Wednesday afternoon.

This was the Boston southpaw's last trial gallop before the big derby. He looked fit, even if he didn't use all his stuff. The Shoemakers managed to accumulate four hits and they came near scoring a couple of runs, but Matty didn't let them get past the close mark.

Cliff Curtis and a gentleman named Kaucher were the umpires chosen at the start. Kaucher is one of the home players.

Notes of Other Training Camps

Ty Cobb is still up to his old tricks. Yesterday, during the Cincinnati game, he was on third base and started a fake run for home, which drew a wild pitch from Fromme, and both he and Crawford scored. It was enough to hold the game safe. The Tigers had no trouble in defeating the Reds, winning by the score of 4 to 2.

The Cleveland Naps beat the Toledo team 4 to 2. The American Association team outhit the big leaguers 8 to 4, but did not run the bases and show the skill that brought in runs. Mitchell and Adams were the battery for the Naps.

The world's champion Athletics took another game from the Phillies in their interleague series at Philadelphia. The series now stands 3 to 1 in favor of the American league team. Both Bender and Plank worked out in the box for the Athletics and were touched up for ten hits.

The New York Giants pulled out their game with the Baltimore team by a fine rally in the eighth inning when they scored seven runs. The score was 4 to 2 against them till then, but hits and errors counted up. Ames and Raymond both twirled good ball for the New York team and held the Eastern leaguers safe.

The Philadelphia Nationals are beginning to cut off some of their extra players. Manager Dooin has released Pitchers Wilhelm and Schettler to the Birmingham Club of the Southern League.

The St. Louis Nationals won another game from the American League team in their interleague series. They won 7 to 6 and outbatted and outplayed their rivals.

WHO'S WHO WITH THE RED SOX

NO. 18—RAY W. COLLINS.

Here's one of those Vermont-built lads. Ray Collins grows like a pine tree and hasn't stopped yet. Belongs in Burlington, born at Colchester, Vt., February 11, 1887. Went to University of Vermont, where he was educated for a profession, but the nearest he came to hitting one is professional baseball. Began professional game with the Red Sox in 1909 and has been on the job ever since. Is lefthanded and stands on the back of his neck when writing. Aside from that he's an all-round good fellow and still retains a college atmosphere. Chief dissipation, life insurance. Favorite sport, dancing.

ONE TOUCHDOWN IN 30 MINUTES

The feature of the Harvard football squad's scrimmage on Soldiers Field was undoubtedly the long run of sixty yards which the lithe and speedy little halfback, Graustein, made when he intercepted a forward pass from Blake and scampered away for the only touchdown made by either team during the thirty minutes' scrimmage.

It will probably be remembered that this same lad is the one who made the dash of nearly the length of the field last year in the game with Brown, that turned the tide and gave Harvard a 12 to 0 win, when it seemed inevitable that the score would be a tie with 6 to 6, for Brown had the ball on Harvard's four-yard line, and only misjudgment by Sprackling made Graustein's run possible.

Only the other day in another scrimmage Graustein made a seventy-yard run on a similar play, and it does seem as though it would be well for Coach Percy Haughton to put this snappy little player in the game whenever it seemed possible that a forward pass was likely to be intercepted.

He Was Head of a Proud Family

By KENNETT HARRIS

YOU are to understand that the Bucklemore family is one of the oldest and most prominent in the State.

There was a Bucklemore in the executive mansion at one time, and he wasn't swabbing floors or cleaning windows either. He was Governor, no less.

Another Bucklemore was a probate judge, and still another a celebrated bushwhacker, who was killed in the vicinity of Petersburg after a homicidal record that would have made the James family green with envy.

Nearly all the Bucklemores owned niggers before the war and they had had a distinguished feud with the Kenzies that decimated the population of half a county and made Kenzies hard to ketch anywhere east of Texas."

Naturally, no connection of such a family, even by marriage, would demean herself by taking in washing. Mrs. Bucklemore was particular to impress that fact on the Winter tourists who came by stealth and with innocent-looking suit cases to her home.

She was of an accommodating disposition and, as a favor and to be accommodating, she would wash and iron a few pieces, being as help was so hard to get; but even that obliging concession must be kept an inviolable secret from her haughty husband.

"He'd take a fit if he knowed it," said Mrs. Bucklemore.

But he never knowed it, being of a singularly unsuspicious and retiring nature—in spots.

Occasionally a tourist with a travelling bag would find to her dismay a gangling, tobacco-stained cracker sitting on the Bucklemore doorstep slicing slivers from a pine stick with a remarkably keen and long-bladed knife.

That was Mr. Bucklemore.

But any alarm would prove to be unnecessary, for after a polite observation or two about the weather or kindred topics, the nicotine-saturated scion of a proud race would unfold his length and fade away in the direction of the barn. He never asked any awkward questions on his return, either.

It is remarkable how unobservant men can be. Bucklemore never seemed to notice that his wife spent two-thirds of her time over her wash tub and ironing board. There was never a day that the little clay-lined charcoal furnace was not glowing in the back yard. Every breeze that blew flapped and snapped strange lace-trimmed and embroidered garments on the clothes line. The thump-thump of the irons sounded from Mondays until Saturdays inclusive, but Bucklemore "never knowed."

Possibly he supposed that the clothes belonged to "the chaps" who rolled and tumbled about the yard. "Chaps" require a heap of clothes, as everybody knows.

In the days when Mr. Bucklemore was "deperty" and made money, his wife was always pestering him about clothes for the chaps. She had quit that of late years. No doubt, she had hoarded vast sums from that affluent period. There was no other way of accounting for the "hawg meat" and "cawfee" that still appeared regularly with the corn bread on his table, or for the fact that she was able to respond to his frequent demands for cash restitution.

"Got any money?" he would growl.

And the faded and saffron-complexioned woman, with the always water-shrivelled fingers, would sigh in an aggravating way and reply:

"Got fo' bits."

"Then gimme it."

Climbing a Family Tree

Then he would shamble off to the grocery, and there he would drown the memory of his wrongs at the hands of unappreciative society in atrocious squirrel whiskey. The squirrel quality almost invariably made him climb his family tree, and from that elevation he poured scorn upon the pigmies below.

One day Bob Sackett got under the torrent, and in the instant of his resentment Bucklemore's eyes were opened to the perfidy of his wife.

"We Sacketts is a low-down, Cheap-John outfit an' pizen mean," he said, smiling, "but our wives ain't doin' washin' for furriners to keep us in whiskey. If we was, we wouldn't go around makin' pretend we didn't know nothin' about it. We-alls counts ourse'ves men."

The blood of all the Bucklemores boiled and mounted to the cracker's face. His snaky eyes glittered, and there was a comprehension in them.

"You're a —— liar!" he said.

Sackett knocked him down.

The remarkably keen and long-bladed knife was where Bucklemore knew it was. The next second the handle in Bucklemore's hand and the blade in Sackett's person. After that Bucklemore went expeditiously home and taxed his guilty wife with her crime.

"So you've been takin' in washin' fer furriners, hev ye!" he cried hoarsely. "You've been a lowerin' me and disgracin' me befo' folks, earnin' dirthy money behind my back, hev ye! You've been a-draggin' the name of Bucklemore through the dust an' mire! Answer me!"

He considerately relaxed his grasp on her throat to allow her to do so, and she took advantage of it as a woman will.

"You—you done knowed it," she gurgled.

"You're a —— liar," he said. "Nobuddy done said a word about it until that —— Bob Sackett throwed it up to me. I cyarved him fer it, an' I'd cyarve you fer a picayune. So I done knowed it!"

When the Sheriff Arrived

He took a fresh grasp and occupied himself with such intenseness and concentration of purpose that the sheriff had to poke him in the ribs with the muzzle of his shotgun to attract his attention.

It appeared that he had carved Mr. Sackett a little too deeply, and the result of the matter was that only the influence of the Bucklemore family saved him from the gallows. He went to prison for the term of his natural life.

Not long after this event, one of the old tourist customers came back. She had a suit case and a basket-telescope in the back of her surrey. Mrs. Bucklemore came down to the gate and sighed at the sight of them.

"You-all don't need to bring the washin' that-a-way no more," she said, wearily. "It don't make no difference now. Mr. Bucklemore, he done found out about it."

Jane Addams, of Hull House, Tells Why Women Should Vote

HEREWITH appears the final article in the series prepared by Miss Jane Addams of Hull House on the topic, "Why Women Should Vote." Miss Addams very cleverly, in the course of her discussion of the woman's suffrage issue, turned the weapons of those opposing votes for women against the wielders, and it is safe to assert that no articles appearing in this newspaper for some time have created so wide a discussion among all classes of readers.

Asks Has Man Proved Worthy of Ballot, and Says His Laws Do Not Warrant Right to Vote.

By JANE ADDAMS

CHESTERTON, in one of his earliest and brilliant essays, bids us admire Browning's father because he destroyed his fortune in order to protest against slavery, and then proceeds to say that while the ideals held by the men of that period appear to us very unattractive and their sense of duty a sort of chilly sentiment when we think of what they did with these cold ideals of theirs, we can scarcely feel superior. They uprooted the enormous Upas tree of slavery, the tree that was literally as old as the race of man, and they altered the whole face of Europe with their deductive fancies.

Vote for Protection

It has always seemed to me that it belonged to this former generation, with their eighteenth century doctrines of liberty and equality and their belief in the rights of man, to have secured suffrage for women. From their doctrinaire point of view they could have made every possible argument for it, with absolutely nothing to be said against it save on the ground of expediency, and expediency they did not believe in.

Certainly the women of modern industry need the suffrage for their own protection as much as the freed slaves needed it for theirs, and the men who secured the franchise for the negro could certainly have done it for women. In fact, many of these men, such as Theodore Parker and Abraham Lincoln, were much concerned as they saw increasing numbers of women entering competitive industry without the safeguard of the ballot.

When we now make a plea for woman's suffrage I at least feel as if I were doing that which should have been accomplished a generation ago; we contemporary women ought now to be using the franchise for the furthering of those plans in which hundreds of women are at this moment absorbingly interested. Women ought to have the municipal vote in order to secure clean milk for tenement house babies; we need the county vote in order to guard and extend the uses of the Juvenile Court; we ought to have the state vote in order to extend the provisions of the child labor law to young boys and even little girls who deliver messages and then papers in the red light district into all hours of the night; we need the federal vote in order to secure a children's bureau which shall enable the nation itself to deal adequately with its under-nourished and illiterate children in whatsoever State they may be found.

Need of Ballot Obvious

The franchise in all of these departments of state thus utilized would only further woman's traditional affairs. We of this generation should be using the franchise quite simply and naturally for securing this much needed legislation, instead of which we are now obliged to obtain these laws as best we may by all sorts of persuasion and roundabout talk. In the meantime, while we give our energies toward securing the mere mechanism of the ballot, important affairs must be pushed aside and industrial conditions allowed to grow worse.

Woman's need of the ballot, or at least the working woman's need of the ballot, is so obvious that it is difficult to make a speech on the subject, while an address setting forth our human right to it is clearly an anachronism; such an address should have been made fifty years ago when men still used the grandiloquent phrases of the Eighteenth Century with solemn conviction. Yet here we are with all this contemporary work which needs to be done, work in which women are so naturally interested, and the ballot is withheld from us largely because the "dogma of the lady" continues to dominate us, although we are so ready to give up all other dogmas, or, to quote still another sentence from Mrs. Putnam's new book, "In contemporary society the lady is an archaism, and can hardly understand herself unless she knows her own history."

Yet comparatively early in this history, so to speak, when the only free women in Greece were the courtesans, Plato dreamed of a republic wherein all men free to exercise all their powers should joyfully use them for the common good, and should gradually forget the ancient chimeras of poverty, disease and crime.

When Plato told the men of Greece of this dream, he begged them not to ridicule him because he considered the co-operation of women necessary for its fulfillment. He asked whether it could be permanently good for the State that half of its adult free population should lag behind the other half in body and mind. He contended that so far as the guardianship of the State is concerned there is no difference between the nature of the man and of the woman, but that natural gifts are found here and there in both sexes alike. He would not tolerate the assumption that women possessed or lacked this or that faculty.

Custom had made certain distinctions, but whether nature concurred in them was to be determined by experiment. Plato possessed perhaps the most gifted mind which the race has produced, and it is significant that it was he who made the boldest declaration of the need of women in the state.

Twenty centuries later women are still afraid of ridicule when they beg the men responsible for the destinies of a great republic to give them a share in the obligations and responsibilities of citizenship.

Who shall say that Plato's dream may never come to pass? Certain it is that the vision of such a state shall continue to haunt the human mind until the best powers of men and women shall at last be united in the upbuilding of an ideal commonwealth, and woman, without self-consciousness or fear of ridicule, shall assume her place in the state as naturally as she has retained it in the family.

THE WAR IN THE AIR

A Thrilling Story of the Invasion of This Country by a Hostile Sky Fleet. By H. G. Wells. Copyright by the Macmillan Company

Synopsis of Preceding Instalments

Bert Smallways, a typical English Cockney lad, is in partnership with his friend Grubb in the bicycle business. He reads of the great man Butteridge, who has perfected the greatest airship in history.

Butteridge is willing to sell his secrets for an enormous sum—preferably to England, because of patriotic reasons, but it is understood that other nations, Germany among them, have made offers to him.

Bert Smallways and his friend Grubb desert the bicycle business and go in for theatricals. They determine to play the beaches.

While singing by the sea they and the crowd surrounding them rescue a balloon containing none other than Butteridge and a woman. Bert, while aiding in the rescue, is carried away in the balloon. Rummaging about in the basket for food, he finds Butteridge's heavy clothes and dons them. This leads him to discover the inventor's letters, blueprints, photos and plans—the secret of the great air inventor. He finds that Germany is expecting a visit from Butteridge.

Bert is carried 10,000 feet in the air, and finally comes low over the ground, near a great encampment, where soldiers shoot at the balloon.

CHAPTER II.—(Continued)

VAST multitudes of men went to and fro, many in white and drab fatigue uniforms, busy about the balloons, others drilling in sensible drab. Here and there a full uniform glittered.

The airships chiefly engaged his attention, and he knew at once it was three of these he had seen on the previous night taking advantage of the cloud welkin to manoeuvre unobserved.

They were altogether fishlike, for the great airships with which Germany attacked New York in her last gigantic effort for world supremacy—before humanity realised that world supremacy was a dream—were the lineal descendants of the Zeppelin airship that flew over Lake Constance in 1906 and of the Lebaudy navigables that made their memorable excursions over Paris in 1907 and 1908.

These German airships were held together by riblike skeletons of steel and aluminum and a stout inelastic canvas outer skin, within which was an impervious rubber gas bag, cut up by transverse dissepiments into from fifty to a hundred compartments.

These were all absolutely gas tight and filled with hydrogen, and the entire aerostat was kept at any level by means of a long internal balloonette of oiled and toughened silk canvas, into which air could be forced and from which it could be pumped.

So the airship could be made either heavier or lighter than air, and losses of weight through the consumption of fuel, the casting of bombs, and so forth, could also be compensated by admitting air to sections of the general gas bag. Ultimately that made a highly explosive mixture, but in all these matters risk must be taken and guarded against.

There was a steel axis to the whole affair, a central backbone which terminated in the engine and propeller, and the men and magazines were forward in a series of cabins under the expanded headlike forepart.

The engine, which was of the extraordinarily powerful Pforzheim type, that supreme triumph of German invention, was worked by wires from this forepart, which was indeed the only really habitable part of the ship.

If anything went wrong the engineers went aft along a rope ladder beneath the frame. The tendency of the whole affair to roll was partly corrected by two vertical fins, which normally lay back like gill flaps on either side of the head.

It was indeed a most complete adaptation of the fish form to aerial conditions, the position of swimming bladder, eyes and brain being, however, below instead of above. A striking and unfishlike feature was the apparatus for wireless telegraphy that dangled from the forward cabin—that is to say, under the chin of the fish.

Monsters of the Sky

These monsters were capable of ninety miles an hour in a calm, so that they could face and make headway against nearly everything except the fiercest tornado. They varied in length from 800 to 2,000 feet, and they had a carrying power of from 70 to 200 tons.

How many Germany possessed history does not record, but Bert counted nearly eighty great bulks receding in perspective during his brief inspection. Such were the instruments on which she chiefly relied to sustain her in her repudiation of the Monroe Doctrine, and her bold bid for a share in the empire of the new world. But not altogether did she rely on these. She had also a one-man bomb throwing Drachenflieger of unknown value among the resources.

But the Drachenflieger were away in the second great aeronautic park east of Hamburg, and Bert Smallways saw nothing of them in the bird's eye view he took of the Franconian establishment before they shot him down, for they shot him down very neatly.

The bullet tore past him and made a sort of pop as it pierced his balloon, a pop that was followed by a rustling sigh and a steadily downward movement. And when in the confusion of the moment he dropped a bag of ballast the Germans very politely, but firmly, overcame his scruples by shooting his balloon again twice.

CHAPTER III.

The German Air Fleet

IT is impossible now to estimate how much of the intellectual and physical energy of the world was wasted in military preparations and equipment, but it was an enormous proportion.

Great Britain spent upon army and navy, money and capacity that, directed into the channels of physical culture and education, would have made the British the aristocracy of the world.

Her rulers could have kept the whole population learning and exercising up to the age of eighteen and made a broad chested and intelligent man of every Bert Smallways in the islands had they given the resources they spent in war material to the making of men. Instead of which they waggled flags at him until he was fourteen, incited him to cheer and then turned him out of school to begin that career of private enterprise we have compactly recorded.

France achieved similar imbecilities; Germany was, if possible, worse; Russia under the waste and stress of militarism festered toward bankruptcy and decay. All Europe was producing big guns and countless swarms of little smallways.

The Asiatic people had been forced in self-defence into a like diversion of the new powers science had brought them.

On the eve of the outbreak of the war there were six great powers in the world, and a cluster of smaller ones, each armed to the teeth and straining every nerve to get ahead of the others in deadliness of equipment and military efficiency.

The great powers were first the United States, a nation addicted to commerce, but roused to military necessities by the efforts of Germany to expand into South America and by the natural consequences of her own unwary annexations of land in the very teeth of Japan.

Two Immense Fleets

She maintained two immense fleets East and West, and internally she was in violent conflict between Federal and State governments upon the question of universal service in a defensive militia.

Next came the great alliance of Eastern Asia, a close knit coalescence of China and Japan, advancing with rapid strides year by year to predominance in the world's affairs.

Then the German alliance still struggled to achieve its dream of imperial expansion and its imposition of the German language upon a forcibly united Europe.

These were the three most spirited and aggressive powers in the world.

Far more pacific was the British Empire, perilously scattered over the globe and distracted now by insurrectionary movements in Ireland and among all its subject races. It had given these subject races cigarettes, boots, bowler hats, cricket, race meetings, cheap revolvers, petroleum, the factory system of industry, half-penny newspapers in both English and the vernacular, inexpensive university degrees, motorcycles and electric trams; it had produced a considerable literature expressing contempt for the subject races and rendered it freely accessible to them, and it had been content to believe that nothing would result from these stimulants because somebody once wrote "the immemorial east" and also, in the inspired words of Kipling—

"East is east and west is west,
And never the twain shall meet."

Instead of which Egypt, India and the subject countries generally had produced new generations in a state of passionate indignation and the utmost energy, activity and modernity.

The Echo of An Old Cry

By DOROTHY DIX

THE chief argument of the anti-suffragists against the emancipation of women is that if you give women the right to vote, you will break up the home, do irreparable injury to the sacred matrimonial institution, foment quarrels between husbands and wives and dull all the finer feelings of women.

Just how the ballot would work these catastrophes to perform, the Antis prudently leave to the imagination, not having any facts to go upon. In the places where women suffrage has been tried none of these disasters has occurred.

Experience shows that the voting woman marries quite as often, and is in every way as attractive to men as her non-voting sisters; also that husbands and wives go amicably to the polls together, as they do elsewhere to church, even when they don't belong to the same religious faith, and that political discussion in the family circles does not raise half such a rumpus as does a difference of opinion on the merit of predestination and infant baptism if a Presbyterian woman is married to a deep-water Baptist man. Yet nobody would advocate for a moment the suppression of religion because a husband and wife were liable to hold different creeds.

In considering the doleful predictions uttered by the Antis concerning the misfortunes that would befall domestic life should women be given the right to vote, it is illuminating to recall that the same class of people have raised the same wail at every step of woman's progress, and yet not a single one of the predicted calamities has befallen society.

The Education Scare

For instance, it was predicted that if women were given an education it would unsex them; that they would lose all of their sweet, charming womanly modesty; that no man would care to marry an educated woman and that the minute you gave women an education they would forsake their homes and neglect their husbands and children in order to devote themselves to the pursuits of knowledge.

Well, to-day every woman can get just as good an education as she desires and has the mind to take, yet women are still doing business at the old stand, in the same old way. Women are still getting married, and having babies, and keeping house. The only difference is that, instead of being ignorant and superstitious, they are intelligent and cultivated, fit companions for educated men.

Similar gloomy forbodings as to what would happen to woman and the family were indulged in by the Antis when it was proposed to secure woman some degree of financial independence by giving her her own property. In the good old days, so beloved by the Antis, when a woman married she became a chattel—as she still is in Louisiana—and all her property passed at once to her husband. There were innumerable cruel instances in which the husband's creditors seized upon the poor little bride's fortune on the way from the altar, and where women, whose husbands died without a will, had to stand helplessly by and see their own money taken from them by their husband's family. Such an injustice called aloud for reform, but there were those—and women among them—who as frantically opposed righting this wrong to woman, as the Antis now oppose righting the wrong of denying women suffrage, and their arguments were precisely the same.

Women Helped by Owen

The other day the club women of Indiana unveiled a bust that they had erected to Robert Dale Owen who was chiefly instrumental in getting for Indiana women the property rights they enjoy. In commenting on this the Indianapolis Star calls attention to the opposition that was levelled at Mr. Owen's bill and the arguments that were advanced against it.

One delegate to the convention declared that property cares "would of necessity withdraw women's attention from that sacred duty which nature has, in its wisdom, assigned to their peculiar care," then he added "the sacred ordinance of marriage and the relations growing out of it should not be disturbed."

Other objections were that such a law would "do most essential injury to the most endearing relations of married life. Controversies would arise, husbands and wives would become armed against each other to the utter destruction of true felicity in married life."

Another solon declared that to give women control of their own property "would be to throw a whole population morally and politically into confusion."

"Is it necessary," demanded one earnest and alarmed delegate, "to explode a volcano under the foundation of the family union?"

It was also solemnly urged that the proposition was in contravention of one of the great fundamentals of the Christian religion. The common law embodies the Divine law, it was declared. "Sir, we have got along now for 1,800 years, and shall we change now?" was one member's passionate appeal.

Another declared that: "Woman's power comes through a self-sacrificing spirit, ready to offer up all her hopes upon the shrine of a husband's wishes."

The Crowning Plea

And this was the crowning plea of the opposition: "This doctrine of separate estate will stifle all the finer feelings, blast the brightest, fairest, happiest hopes of the human family, and go in direct contravention of that law which bears the imprints of the Almighty hand."

Don't these arguments against women's property rights have a strangely familiar sound, for they are practically the same argument offered sixty years later against giving women the right to vote?

And is there a single Lady Anti with a house and lot in her own name, and her own individual bank book, who isn't ready to laugh at the objections that were raised toward giving women the control of their property?

Desperate Desmond

A Continued Picture Drama of Love and Hate, with a Thrill in Its Every Picture

I'LL PRACTICE ON THAT APPLE AFTER I KILL YOU I WILL STEAL YOUR ROSAMOND
YOU CUR!
I DEFY YOU DESMOND
DESMOND SPLITS THE APPLE. THERE IS A WORM IN IT, TOO!
NOT A BIRD AROUND FOR DAYS. I'VE GOT TO HAVE MORE SPECIMENS BEFORE I LEAVE BORNEO
BIRDS FROM ALL DIRECTIONS THEY SPY THE WORM!
ASSISTANCE AT LAST!
BIRDS AT LAST. WHAT'S THIS— FOUL PLAY
CURSES! I MUST ESCAPE WITH ROSAMOND!
I'LL NEVER MARRY YOU, DESMOND. I LOVE CLAUDE.
HERSHFIELD

It was Desmond's intention to shoot Claude with red hot arrows, but he has decided to do a little fancy shooting first. Placing an apple on the devoted head of our brave hero, he attempts to duplicate the feat said to have been successfully performed some years ago by one William Tell of Switzerland.

And what's more, the villain gets away with it. His first arrow cleaves the apple in twain, to the greatt astonishment of the worm within. Now a worm isn't much to look at, and you'd scarcely think such an insignicant creature could have any influence on the fate of our hero, but that's where you are wrong.

Let us pause here a moment to renew acquaintance with our old friend Nimrod Jones, the Faunal naturalist. He is trying to get a specimen of each and every bird that inhabits the island of Borneo, but business seems to be very slow to-day. It's very, very discouraging, but what can he do about it?

It so happens that this has been an off year for worms in Borneo, and the minute Desmond's arrow exposes the one that was in the apple, every bird on the island seems to know it by instinct and to make a bee line for the spot. There are some things in nature that have wireless telegraphy backed off the boards.

When Nimrod Jones sees all those birds flying toward one particular place, he makes it his business to follow them. Thus it happens that he arrives on the scene just in time to save Claude Eclaire from the vengeance of Desperate Desmond, but not soon enough to prevent the villain from carrying Rosamond away.

Pipe the devilish ingenuity of Desmond's scheme. He has suspended Rosamond from the limb of a tree extending over a river swarming with crocodiles and is sawing through the limb as slowly as possible in order to prolong her agony. We hope he will repent before it is too late. Perhaps he will in Monday's pictures.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

GO TO THE PARTY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl of seventeen and for the past five months have known a young man of about the same age. During that time he has been telling me of his love and I, in turn, did likewise.

I like this man very much and always did everything to please him, and this, I think, is the reason why he wants me to give in to him first. Very often he gets angry at me for no reason at all, and then wants me to bow first, which I always did. Do you think I did right?

Now he is going to hold a social gathering at his home and has invited me; but I refused, knowing that he would have some of his lady friends there, and I think he cares for them more than he does for me.

Kindly give me your advice. Was I right in refusing, and how should I act toward him in the future? Do you think that he cares for me as he says?

B. G.

MY dear, you could not expect him to have no girls but yourself at his party. Don't be foolish, but go and have a good time without any jealousy. He should not always expect you to take the first step toward a reconciliation, but it is better to do that than to sulk.

TIME WILL PROVE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen years of age and several months ago I made the acquaintance of a young man four years my senior who asked me to let him call and see me.

I consented and, after several visits, at my residence, he proposed to me, telling me, however, frankly, that he had jilted a young lady before, owing to her ungovernable temper.

When I mentioned the matter to my parents, explaining everything, they would not listen, saying that he might do the same with me, and they strictly forbade me to see him again.

Since that time we have been forced to meet secretly. He is a steady and quiet young man and I am sure that his attentions toward me are serious.

H. B.

I DO not think the breaking of his former engagement should prevent your being engaged to him. He could not marry a girl whose temper was so bad as to make married life impossible. Tell your parents that you are quite sure of his love and that you cannot be happy unless you marry him. I think they will consent in time.

BETTER NOT VISIT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been keeping a friendship with a young lady who resides out of town. She came to this city on a visit to some friends, who invited me to be with them as an escort to the young lady.

After she returned home I was invited to spend a few days in her town, which I did. I only wish to remain a friend, but I am inclined to think that she is very serious, after giving me a nice present. Now, kindly advise me how to retain her frindship only, also if it would be proper to visit her again.

J. B.

IF you think the girl cares more for you than you do for her, it would be much better to pay no more visits at her home. If the affair stops she will soon forget it; but if you keep on going to see her she will have every reason to consider your attentions serious.

'Tis Folly to Be Wise

TOO closely do not peer,
Too strictly do not pry.
At times just fail to hear
And wink the other eye.
Some things no doubt you'll miss,
But spare your ears and eyes.
Where ignorance is bliss,
'Tis folly to be wise.

Take what appears on trust,
Don't put it to the test;
Be cautious when you must,
And live your life with zest.
Accept the Judas kiss,
Believe the honeyed lies,
Where ignorance is bliss,
'Tis folly to be wise.

The world's a bitter school
For those too apt to learn.
I'll be the happy fool
And not the cynic stern.
Take careful heed to this:
Once doubt, and friendship dies.
Where ignorance is bliss,

How to Keep the Kitchen Clean

THE thought of an untidy kitchen is abhorrent to the good housekeeper. The trouble lies with being more able to spot dirt and scold about it than to give rules for its prevention.

When a new maid arrives the mistress should tell her explicitly how she likes the work managed instead of saying, "I expect your kitchen to be spotless."

There should be times for each cleaning process besides the ordinary daily cleaning up. Every girl should be made to sweep up the kitchen floor at least once a day, preferably after each meal, to wash off table tops and sink after every dishwashing time and to dust thoroughly each morning.

In no room of the house is clutter and dust more unsanitary, yet little attention is often paid to systematic fighting of it. Sometimes this is due to lack of provision. Every kitchen should be equipped with a broom, roller, brush and pan, dustless dusters, scrubbing brushes, chamois skins, pail and scrub cloths of its own.

Many cooks will wipe up a kitchen table with the same cloth used for the floor or, worse yet, the dishcloth. For this reason have sets of cloths distinct in color for each operation, and there is no excuse for mixing them. The same holds good of brushes; there should be a sink brush, another for vegetables, a third for table tops, and a fourth for floors. Also have mops of different size and thickness to use on pots, pans and bottles.

The care of kitchen floor depends upon the material with which it is covered. If there is a good quality of linoleum on it work is simplified, as beyond daily brushing up it will only need semi-weekly scrubbing with skim milk. Never use soap on linoleum. To brighten rub with a cloth wet in linseed oil after the floor has been washed and well dried.

CHAPTER IX.—(Continued)

"THERE have been obstacles," Templar went on coolly; there are now removed. My relatives wish to see Madame Sylvia. And I have promised to get them a box.

"A line from the lady might make some difference," the Management admitted.

"That's just it," said Templar. "She doesn't know. And I want to tell her myself. It's a rather romantic business altogether. You see, we parted for ever, and now it's all right. And she doesn't know. If I tell her before the performance it might upset her—prevent her dancing or something. I shall sit well back in the box—she won't see me—and then tell her afterwards. It's her last night this week. She'll have a day or two to think it over. Come—I know these things can be worked. I'll give thirty guineas for a box.

"That's not business," the Management reminded him, reprovingly. "The box is six guineas." Then it stood in thought.

"How am I to know all this is so?" it said.

"I beg your pardon?" said Templar.

"Oh, I don't mean I doubt your word," said the other. "Don't you think that; but if there was some mistake?"

Templar Makes a Threat

"The mistake will be if you don't get me a box," said Templar. "You know her. How do you think she'll take it when she knows you wouldn't let me in—on this night of all nights?"

The Management did know her. It knew that she was capable of leaving him on an instant's pique, and, though he might make her pay a forfeit, that would not fill his house as she had filled it.

Then there was Mr. Mosenthal, a power behind those scenes. If this were true, and the Management thought it was—a refusal would only exasperate the girl and her lover and would not retard that abandonment of the boards which marriage usually spelt. If it were not true—well, this man's six guineas were as good as the next man's; and as he seemed a gentleman, he wouldn't make a scene or anything.

"Well?" said Templar.

"Well," said the Management, "as a matter of fact there is a box. Lady Jute—killed by her own motor this morning—yes, there is a box."

CHAPTER X.

Lovers' Meeting

THAT was how it happened that when Sylvia stood that night before her audience she stood before her lover, and among the hands that applauded the radiant appearance his hands were.

The aunt, looking really very nice in her black satin and old Honiton, sat in front of the box with the uncle.

Templar, true to his understanding with the management, kept well back among the shadows.

And Sylvia danced. Pan was a triton now. A glittering, scaly fish-tail showed instead of the poor lame foot, and the other foot that did not match. His golden hair was crowned with brown, glistening, wet seaweed, and from a collar of seaweed trails of it drooped above his chest and arms. The music he made came from his pipe—but it seemed as though it came from a long seashell that he held to his lips.

And Sylvia danced. How pretty she was—how dear! How fresh and sweet, how lovely and beloved! Mr. Templar, lurking behind his aunt, longed to cry out in the face of the crowded house: "She is mine. She belongs to me," to catch her in his arms then and there and to carry her away to that island which glowed in faint amber and opal and gold far away across the painted sea of the scene behind her.

All the jealous irritation that he had felt in gazing on her face, gay in spite of what lay between them, had vanished now.

Now he had eyes to see that she had been brave, not heartless—for as he watched her the conviction grew in him that she also knew that now nothing lay between them. Nothing but love.

The Dance of Love

He knew that she knew it—because the unclouded sunlight of joy in her eyes showed him for the first time that the light that had been there in the dances of these long weeks had been only the light of a candle carefully lit and guarded. And the delicate, joyous abandon of her every movement was new—new as his own new joy.

The dance ended.

"It is pretty," said the aunt. "Do you remember Miss Clara Vaughan, Henry? She reminds me of her a little. How do you like it, Henry?"

"It's remarkable, remarkable," he said. "She is certainly a very talented young woman. She doesn't look a day over eighteen. And yet I suppose she must be."

"Oh, you may depend she's over thirty," said the aunt confidently. "All these actresses are. But they always make up young. I'm sure it's wonderful how they do it."

"She's only twenty-one," said Edmund shortly.

"Come out and take a turn," said the uncle. "There's an interval, I suppose."

"Only a minute or two while they change the scene," said Edmund, but he rose and followed his uncle.

Outside, "My boy," the uncle said, "I'm sorry to see this. I don't want to preach, dear lad—young men will be young men, but I'm sorry to see it."

"I don't know what you mean," lied Edmund.

"You shouldn't look at her like that, you know," the uncle went on. "Lord! I've been young myself, and no one saw it but me. But you should be careful. There's many a young man has had reason to wish he'd never entered such walls as these and * * *"

"I ought to tell you," said Templar carefully, "that that lady and I are engaged to be married."

"Lord!" said the uncle. "There—the lights are down—not a word to your aunt. It's lucky she won't own to needing glasses. She can't see half of it."

Edmund has this to think of through the next, the Dance of War.

"She is rather clever," was the aunt's verdict. "Really, Henry, she made me want to get up and go and fight somebody—didn't she you?"

Edmund got his uncle out again.

His Uncle Knows

"What did you mean by what you said just now? That my aunt didn't see half of it. You can't mean that you think it's a thing she ought not to see?"

"Bless my soul, no," said the uncle, full of a raging conflict between hurt family pride and gentlemanly feeling—"of course not. I never saw a more modest dance—never, upon my word. It's quite amazing. I assure you if you'd ask me what was the first thing that had struck me about her I should have said her modesty. I should, indeed."

"Then, what did you mean?"

"Well—the fact is . . . I'd rather have broken it to you gently, my boy, but if you will have it . . ."

"I will have it, please."

"Then, what I mean to say . . . this young lady is the young lady. That poor neglected young thing we were talking about only to-day. I recognized her at once, and so would your aunt if she'd get her spectacles on. It's no use beating about the bush, my boy. That young lady's real name is Sandra Mundy."

"Is that all?" said Edmund with a laugh of relief. "Why, I knew that all along!"

"Oh, well—as—then there's no more to be said . . . at present, Edmund. We must talk it all over quietly to-morrow, eh, my boy, and see what can be done.

Edmund in sharp surprise blessed the uncle for his intelligent sympathy. The uncle was saying to himself.

"I must humor him, humor him. Anything to gain time. And then we can look about us and see if she can't be bought off. I wouldn't stand out against anything reasonable. Poor lad—poor young fool. But I was just like it. Poor little Carlotta . . . Well, well."

The curtain was rising for the last dance. It was the dance of Salome. This only, of all her dances, her lover had never seen. The idea of it repelled him—and he knew from her that it had at first repelled her also.

"But I had to do it," she had said; everyone does it now. Your repertoire's not complete without a Salome dance with that horrible head. But I've made it something different from any of the others. For one thing, I don't take the head off the sideboard as if it were the cold joint of beef. It just comes to me. Maskelyne and Devant fixed that up for me—and Denny works it. He's not on in that scene.

The Dance With the Head

But now Templar had to see it. There was no way out of it, short of closing his eyes, and that he could not do. The curtain was up.

The Court of an Eastern King: Attendants with fans and torches, and fire in braziers on tall iron pillars. On the throne Herod, sick unto death; beside him a white-faced, shrinking Herodias, courtiers, slaves. And the eyes of all fixed on Salome.

Straight drapery covered her from breast to ankle. A half transparent veil was drawn about her in folds that, across neck and face, showed opaque and heavy where the light stuff was crushed and held in folds by the hands beneath her chin. Through it the jewels on neck and arms gleamed fitfully. A golden fillet confined her long hair, a heavy red gem glowed on her brow, and between veil and jewel her eyes shone like sombre stars.

The King, Queen, the courtiers and slaves were immobile; they were only the living background to the moving picture of Salome's dance.

She moved slowly, with little steps, and the patent consciousness that she was in the presence of the King. She danced to please him. To him, with obeisance and gestures of deferent humility, she dedicated her dance.

And, unperceived by any save those who knew what to look for, a veil of almost invisible gauze fell between her and her living background. A few more steps, a few more gestures of the veiled arms, and another curtain fell—another, as the slow steps traced circles on the marble floor, slid out from one side across the stage—now, from the opposite side, another—gray veils falling, falling, gliding across, produced to the utmost the illusion of a gathering dusk, a deepening twilight through which the figures of King and Queen and deferent courtiers showed dim and vague as shadows, and the lights of torch and brazier shone like marsh lights in a marsh mist. The gray veils thickened to darkness—the lights were gone—Salome was alone in a twilight that slowly lightened to moonlight, in which she stood, arms reached out, her veil round her feet.

The Story of a Golden Soup.

Once upon a time in a great Eastern city there lived a wonderful chef who served a famous soup to the members of a famous club. It happened one day that he tasted his soup and straightway he knew why it was so famous. It was most superlatively good. That night he dreamed a dream and the dream that he dreamed many years ago is now coming true.

"I will make my soup known wherever soup is sipped," dreamed he, "and it shall make me rich."

So he canned his soup and offered it timidly for sale. The club members bought it for their home tables. Recognizing its surpassing richness, the exclusive grocer of the city put in a stock, but the soup did not sell, as the chef thought it would because it had not occurred to him to tell about the soup by advertising. And, therefore, though his product was the richest and best, the dream that he dreamed proved to have only the warp and weft that dreams are made of.

In the fulness of time the chef died, and two daughters succeeded to the little soup business their father had started. And as they didn't realize the power of advertising the little business grew smaller and smaller until it seemed likely to disappear altogether.

At last a youth heard of the soup and walked into the little kitchen where the canning was done and extolled the value of advertising. The suggestion fell, however, upon heedless ears, for the manager hadn't sufficient imagination to conceive of the power of the modern Aladdin's lamp which the progressive merchants use.

Years went by, but ever in the mind of that youth was the thought of that soup and its desirable qualities. He became obsessed with soup.

SOUP—SOUP—SOUP was the constant theme of his thought, until finally he, too, had a dream of SOUP—SOUP—GOLDEN SOUP. It long looked as evasive as the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. One day, however, he met a capitalist who likewise had imagination and who saw the vision of the golden soup the young man depicted. He assisted the young man to form a stock company which bought out the soup business, established modern methods in the little soup kitchen and commenced forceful newspaper advertising.

At once signs of increase appeared. The original grocer who had stocked the goods in limited quantities for years doubled his orders. Leading grocers in other centres stocked the soup. The business under the forceful advertising doubled, trebled and quadrupled marvelously in an incredibly short space of time and it's still growing. The best grocers are demanding the soup and the best people are buying it because of the delicious quality and forceful advertising.

Now the young man is president of the company. The sales are fast spreading from ocean to ocean. The best grocers are becoming impetuous in their rush for the agency and to-day the soup is becoming famous wherever a delicious food is desired by an appreciative and discerning palate.

So you see how it came about that the dream which an old man dreamed was later dreamed by a keen, persistent youth and is fast taking on through the magic power of advertising the substance of a golden reality.

The old chef had the goods but not the advertising. The youth saw the possibility of the soup and knew the value of advertising.

All of which goes to show what has been so often said here—newspaper advertising is the best kind of a salesman for any kind of goods. It will build up a market for new goods or put vigor into a dead market for old goods. Advertising is the wand that can transmute into gold any desirable commodity.

When you use the Boston American in the New England field you can talk each night to almost 400,000 people at the very time when they are at leisure to hear what you have to say and can be influenced to buy your goods. Think what a forceful salesman it can be for you.

101 WILD WEST SHOW IS HERE

Through Boston's streets this morning hundreds of Indians and cowboys, pretty cow girls, Mexican vaqueros and rurales, Canadian mounted police and Cossack wild riders paraded to lively band music.

Everybody in the parade rode a spirited horse and the banner of the 101 Ranch Wild West Show floated over them.

Hundreds of children who saw the parade pass boasted proudly that they were to be the guests of the Boston AMERICAN at the Wild West Show next Tuesday afternoon, and thousands more shut up within the high walls of orphan asylums far away from the route of the parade were a little happier than usual because their teachers had promised that they should see the show.

The Wild West! The name thrills every grown-up but it delights the children. No boy who is worth his salt but has worshipped the frontier heroes and wished he were old enough to parade the border with a gun and remove a few Indians from the prairies.

A few of the real Indians with the Wild West Show will make the young men who aspire to use them for targets pause and consider, for when these braves have their warpaint on they are very fierce to look at, and it would take several small boys to blot out a single Indian.

However, the 101 Ranch Indians are good natured and George Arlington, general manager of the show, has informed them of the visit of all the poor little children, and they have promised to behave.

George Arlington is one of the best known circus men in the world. For years he was manager of Barnum and Bailey's Greatest Show on Earth and he was an intimate associate of the late P. T. Barnum, the world's greatest showman.

Mr. Arlington is now manager of the 101 Ranch show. When he heard that the AMERICAN was going to bring nearly 4,000 little children to the Tuesday matinee Mr. Arlington cogitated deeply.

"What does a boy or girl want besides seeing a circus? Why, a bag of peanuts, of course. I will see that every one of those orphans and cripples has enough peanuts to last him until the show is over."

That's George Arlington.

A dozen Indian children will participate in the archery contest. Riding horseback at full speed, they send volleys of arrows straight to the heart of a canvas bulls eye.

ENGINEERS DEPOSED WHILE FIGHTING FIRE

With P. Sarsfield Cuniff dissenting, James D. Evans and George Fred Robinson, the other two members of Watertown's Board of Selectmen, created a fresh surprise by removing Engineers John J. Murphy and James H. Jackson, both veterans in the service. Howard O. McLaughlin, formerly an engineer, and John W. O'Hearn, a call fireman, were appointed. Murphy and Jackson were responding to an alarm when they were deposed. The board's announced reason for removing Murphy is that his position with the Walker & Pratt Manufacturing Company hinders him from responding to alarms.

HIGH PRESSURE BILL IS PASSED

Mayor Fitzgerald's bill allowing Boston to spend $1,000,000 in five years for the establishment of a high-pressure water service for fighting fires was passed to be engrossed in the House of Representatives without debate. The bill has already been passed by the Senate.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

Spring ducks are in the market. They come from Southern States and sell for $2 a pair.

Squabs are a little more plentiful than they have been for the past two months, but they are still scarce and rather high. Good sized ones sell for $5 a dozen. Native pigeons sell for $3 a dozen.

Fresh Eastern poultry is high. Roasters sell for 34 cents a pound and fowls for 23. Western roasters sell for about 25 cents a pound and fowls for 23 cents.

California asparagus is coming into the Eastern markets in big lots and the price is dropping daily. The finest retails for about 50 cents a bunch, and an excellent bunch can be obtained for 35 cents.

Grapefruit is cheaper at present than it has ever been in the New England markets. Fine big specimens of this popular breakfast citrus can be bought now as low as five cents each.

Maple sugar and syrup are scarce. The supply has fallen off greatly in recent years, especially since the pure food law stopped, to a large degree, the adulteration of these products, but the cold, late Spring of the present year has greatly curtailed the production. Maple sugar sells for 25 cents a pound at present and syrup for $1.50 a gallon.

Here's the Bavarian Harem Skirt

The French comic paper, Le Rire, publishes the above cartoon with the comment, "The Bavarian model of the Harem skirt made its first appearance at the race track and created a sensation."

CURLEY BACK TO GO TO HOSPITAL

Congressman James M. Curley, accompanied by Mrs. Curley, is back from Washington to undergo a long treatment for an obstinate illness and another operation. Mr. Curley has suffered greatly by his trip to the capital. Although not of a serious nature, the Congressman's illness requires immediate attention and upon his arriving at his home at No. 105 Mt. Pleasant avenue, Roxbury, the family physician was summoned.

Congressman Curley says he will attend the meeting of the City Council Monday afternoon and that he will finish up much of the business that has been taking his attention for some time. Monday night he will enter the City Hospital for treatment. It may be two months before he will be able to be about, it is said.

Mr. Curley did not expect to return for a week or more, but his illness forced him to relinquish his duties.

CAROLINA WHITE THE SYMPHONY SOLOIST

The largest hat that ever entered Symphony Hall arrived there yesterday on the head of Madame Carolina White. The young singer must have walked in from Newtonville, for she could never have got it through a carriage or street car door, and the stage entrance of Symphony Hall was none too wide.

Madame Carolina must have desired to make a sensation on her debut with the great orchestra of her home city, for she also wore a hobble skirt, and several women in the second balcony almost fell over the rail trying to get a look at her.

However, all this was preliminary to the singing. The first number was "Ebben? Ne Andro Lontana" from Catalini's "La Wally." Miss White did nothing to justify her selection of it, although she sang sweetly and correctly. She was much better in the prison song from "Mefistofele," which is lovely music and well suited to her voice.

The orchestra played the famous "Manfred" symphonic poem of Tschaikowsky, a grand and inspiring "Te Deum Laudamus" by Sgambati and Beethoven's "Leonora" overture.

HAYNES' CREW IS RECOVERING

Over at the Mystic docks in Charlestown Captain Robert W. Rickson and his men of the three-master J. Manchester Haynes are recovering from the strain and hardships of their thirty-five day battle with wind and sea. Last night they slept peacefully for the first time in a month.

Driven far out of the course from Brunswick, Ga., to Boston, by five successive gales, obliged to work almost continuously night and day, half starved, and soaked to the skin by the high seas, the crew of the Haynes was picked up by the revenue cutter Gresham while she was beating up for the entrance to the harbor, twenty-eight days overdue.

The appearance of both crew and vessel was evidence of what both had gone through.

Blame It On the Name.

"It's the last time I'll ever ship in a hooker with her name split in the middle," declared one member of the crew. "I think that hoodoed us for fair."

Captain Dickson, almost unable to stand from sheer exhaustion and exposure, sat in the water soaked cabin and told in simple sailor fashion this story of the cruise before going to his home in Malden, where his bride of a few months anxiously awaited him.

"This cabin has been full of water during our entire trip," he said. "Everything here was spoiled. Our clothes went. We couldn't save them. We didn't have anything to change into. We were wet—wet—wet, all the time. When I slept, I had to sleep in the galley.

"But I didn't sleep. For the last thirty days I haven't slept. It has been h——.

"We left Brunswick on February 28 with lumber. Three days after we put out we ran into our first storm. It came down from the northwest, blowing a gale, and the snow was in the gale—sheets of it. The waves smashed out the cabin windows, and the cabin filled with water. Then they got into our deck-load, and tore that to pieces.

From Hatteras to Sable.

The first land we sighted after that first storm hit us off Cape Hatteras was Cape Sable, N. S. And before we got up as far North as that, we must have been driven nearly over to the Azores.

"Drive, drive, drive, in front of a storm we would, and then beat back and beat back until the next one hit us.

"The first storm drove us 500 to 600 miles. After the first one we beat back and beat back, thinking that we'd get good weather. But five days later—Bang! It hit us again from the nor'west and we drove and drove in front of it for 300 miles.

"After the second storm we thought sure we were safe. Back again we beat, to get onto our course; but three days later the third gale struck us square, coming from the nor'east, and away we went again for 200 miles.

"It was work, work, work, every minute of the day and night. The crew began to get despondent. I can't blame 'em. If I'd been in their place I'd have been despondent. They couldn't find a chance to sleep, poor cusses.

"After the third storm we worked back and sighted Sable Island. Then we knew we were away north, so we turned back again. We were down off the Georges, just ready to drop into port, when the fourth gale hit us. It doesn't seem possible that there could be such weather. After all we'd been through it was awful to see another come tearing into us. A hundred and fifty miles the fourth one drove us off, and the men were ready to give up.

Food Low, Water Poor.

"Then, on top of all our other troubles, our food went low. We were provisioned for thirty days, and the thirty days were gone. Our oil was out, and we didn't have a binnacle light. Our water was down at the bottom of the casks. It was full of iron rust and tasted like mud. We were down to salt meat and bread, and none too much of that—no sleep—and then no food to get our strength!

"Well, we worked back to the Georges Banks, and there we spoke the fishing schooner Hortense, and asked her for enough provisions to carry us back to Boston. The men were scarcely able to drag 'emselves over the deck by that time. The Hortense gave us meat and flour and oil, and we were all ready to go in, when the fifth gale hit us.

"It almost killed us all. The men were so discouraged that some of them didn't care whether they lived or died. Another 150 miles we were driven out of our course, working and working without any sleep until we almost went crazy.

"After the fifth gale, we worked back to the Georges, and then we came straight in toward port. For two days we've been lying off Boston harbor, bucking into head winds and trying to get into port. And all I can say is 'Thank God, we're here.'"

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STOCK MARKET FIRM AT CLOSE

STATE STREET, April 8.—Closing: Possibility of the Supreme Court handing down a decision in the "trust" cases on Monday was used at the opening to force prices off, but as all of this has been discounted, the selling movement quickly became exhausted and prices closed slightly above yesterday's close with a firm tone to list.

Rumors that stop-loss orders were plentiful at 155 in Reading gave bears some encouragement, but when they got the stock down to that price the orders were not to be found.

Missouri Pacific attracted most attention by its persistent decline. It was said that most of the stock was coming from No. 26 Broadway, which is quite probable as anything above 30 would not hurt the new controlling interests, and furthermore they want more stock at lower prices.

Steel, General Electric and Union Pacific were the issues to show the greatest advances, though they were only fractional.

After the close, dispatches from St. Paul told of the United States Circuit Court for the Eighth District having handed down a decision in the Minneapolis rate case favorable to the railroads. This should be a sustaining factor on Monday.

INJURED BY A TREE, SUES FOR $15,000

Robert Donahue of Oliver street, Newburyport, entered suit in the Superior Court at Salem for $15,000 against the city of Newburyport for the death of his son, John J. Donahue, seven years old. He alleges that while the tree warden of that city and three of his employes were trimming the branches of a decayed tree in October last they negligently permitted a large branch to fall. It struck the boy, injuring him fatally. Two other children were hurt, but not seriously.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

Weakness of Missouri Pacific needs no explanation because it can go to 30 without hurting the interests in control, and probably will go there before the new management gets done putting new securities ahead of the stock.

Since all movements in the market have specified explanations those movements do not shed any light upon the direction in which the market will probably move while waiting for the Supreme Court decisions—if that is what the market really is waiting for.

Some attempt is being made to revive interest in the decisions by quoting a mysterious trust lawyer who says that the finding in the cut rate medicine case last Monday means that the court will decide against both the Oil and the Tobacco companies. For the last six months the whole financial world has been expecting a decision against both of the companies, and the only feature of interest is the possibility of the court showing a way out of the business labyrinth.

Several stock brokers complain bitterly that business men who formerly traded freely in stocks are riding round in automobiles and in that way spending the money that formerly went to the brokers. The automobile craze has not ceased to influence the stock market, for business men who formerly spent their time in brokers' offices while waiting for a dull period in trade to pass by, are finding it much more enjoyable and profitable to spend the money for automobiles. This robs State street of a large percentage of the speculative business and makes the trading on the exchange represent very correctly the true investment situation.

Activity in Pittsburg Coal stock was explained by a report that a plan was being formed for funding the dividends accumulated on the preferred stock. This is the official method of putting up the price of American Can preferred, and if the coal company persists in using it the syndicate which owns the original patent on the plan will enjoin the coal syndicate from using it. A plan that can move a stock in this market is not to be surrendered lightly.

Why the Senate Must Expel Lorimer

The Senate must expel Lorimer because, by all the evidence, he is a mortgaged man. Because his place was bought for him—not with his own money, but by the money of commercial masters, under agreement that he was to be THEIR Senator.

Thus everything he touches in the Senate is smeared by the taint of bribe money. Every thought, every act, every vote of Lorimer is a thought, an act, a vote, not for the country, not for the State of Illinois, but for those who bought the Lorimer seat, paid cash for it, and now insist that it shall be used and occupied to exalt the power of privilege and to pervert the power of the government and the fortunes of the people.

This Lorimer case is a new, a wholly unprecedented case—so far as the Senate is concerned. Never in its history has clear evidence been shown concerning any Senator, that he was a purchased tool of other men.

In two well-remembered instances of investigation by the Senate into charges that a Senator had obtained his seat by corruption, the offence was very grave in a personal sense, but the menace to the nation was not as great as the Lorimer case, and for this reason:

The other two Senators accused were very rich men, who were said to have bought their Senate seats with their own money. It was an act of corruption springing from personal vanity, the desire to win political distinction without deserving it.

If the charge was true these Senators were unworthy to hold their seats, and should have been unseated as individually criminal and unworthy. BUT THEIR PRESENCE IN THE SENATE DID NOT TAINT THE ACTS OF THE SENATE ITSELF.

They were not very dangerous, because they owned themselves. Even when they held their seats in the Senate it was at least POSSIBLE that they would act in freedom. It was POSSIBLE that they would think and vote in accord with the sentiment of their States and for the general welfare of the country.

But Lorimer—if the charges are true—does not own himself. He cannot act either for his State or for his country. HE MUST ACT FOR THE MEN WHO OWN HIM, the men and interests that put him in the Senate as their private servant.

His continuance in the Senate is, therefore, a pollution of the VERY SOURCE OF POWER IN THIS COUNTRY.

By the imperative law of self-preservation the people are bound to press this issue to the end.

Every man in America is in a hurry—or he ought to be. There are many opportunities in every hour, but there are few hours in the day, and few years in a lifetime.

No man can afford to waste the days or the minutes. But every man in every city is compelled to waste valuable hours—in the long run —PICKING PINS AND WOODEN SHIRT STUDS OUT OF THE SHIRTS THAT THE LAUNDRY SENDS HOME.

Against this infernal nuisance, outrage and dangerous practice we do solemnly protest.

You send your shirt to the laundry in its natural ingenuous state. You get it back in some artificial, painful condition, like a trussed fowl ready for the oven. You are in a hurry to get into the shirt and out into the busy world. But, no matter how great the hurry, YOU HAVE GOT TO STOP AND ATTEND TO THE INGENIOUS PINNING AND BUTTONING OF THAT SHIRT.

First, you take a wooden stud out of the neck of the shirt—why, in Heaven's name, should that stud be put there? In extreme cases, you take one· two or three studs, as the case may be, from the bosom of the shirt, and you throw these on the floor—and later in the day you step on them with your bare feet.

Then you begin to take the pins out of the back of the shirt. On each of the shoulders there is a pin, fastened with cement-like tightness by the starch. You break one or two finger-nails pulling out the two pins. Then you go lower down, and you find two more pins fastening the tails of the inner shirt together. Why in the name of all that is kind and considerate should those shirt tails be pinned together?

Then you look around for more pins, and you don't find any. You put in the cuff buttons; you arrange your own set of studs—mere foolish waste of time. Then you pull the shirt over your head angrily, and jam your arms into the sleeves.

You find that you have neglected to take out the pin from each of those sleeves. You pull the shirt off over your head again, put it down solemnly—not without harm to the Ten Commandments—to take two more pins out of the shirt sleeves, just above the cuffs, and at last you get the shirt on.

Have you ever done all of that, reader? If you have, why do you continue to do it? Why don't you say something, or, better still, do something to the men that manage the laundries?

Laundry owners, washerwomen, washermen, all you that have to do with the cleaning of shirts in this country, will you not, in the name of kind and gentle Heaven, leave some of those pins and some of those wooden studs out of the shirts?

What would you think, O launderers and laundresses if you started to read this newspaper and you had to take seventeen pins and seventeen wooden shirt studs out of it before you could begin to read it? Would you not swear? Would you not loathe even the name and thought of an editor?

Well, launderers, and laundresses, how do you think forty millions of men in America feel—more or less—when they have to take that number of pins and shirt studs out of the shirt which they own, which ought to be given back to them as pinless and as studless as they gave it to you?

P. S. We forgot to say that it happens very often indeed that the man who gets back the shirt, and does his best to pick out the pins, doesn't find the last pin or two until he sits down on them.

P. P. S. There are some laundries—especially in Chicago—that put sharp pins and wooden studs into the shirts, and, as a crowning insult, also stuff a large piece of flat cardboard among the pins as an additional insult. Of course, this is done wantonly and wilfully, and there is no use protesting against that which is of itself intentionally vicious.

WHY SO AGITATED, TIGHTWADDO?
OH MR. SHERLOCKO, I WAS ON MY WAY TO SEE YOU! I'VE BEEN ROBBED!
ROBBED!
WAS IT A LARGE SUM OF MONEY MR. TIGHTWADDO?
YES! A QUARTER! SOMEONE PICKED MY POCKET ON MY WAY HOME FROM THE OFFICE!
THIS IS HORRIBLE!
WHERE DO YOU CARRY YOUR MONEY?
SH! NOT SO LOUD! I HAD IT IN THE INSIDE POCKET OF MY VEST!
MUST HAVE BEEN A CLEVER THIEF!
DID ANYONE JOSTLE YOU ON THE CAR?
NO, I DIDN'T TAKE THE CAR,—I WALKED,—I LIKE THE EXERCISE, AND BESIDES, IT'S CHEAPER!
LET ME SEE THAT VEST POCKET. AH! THERE'S A HOLE IN IT! YOU HAVE NOT BEEN ROBBED!
YES, BUT MY MONEY IS GONE JUST THE SAME!
NO, MR. TIGHTWADDO. THE QUARTER IS SAFE! I CAN FEEL IT THROUGH THE LINING OF YOUR VEST!
MR. SHERLOCKO, YOU ARE A GREAT DETECTIVE! YOU HAVE TAKEN A GREAT LOAD OFF MY MIND!
MARVELOUS!

Now Is the Time to Subscribe for the Next Opera Season

The Boston Opera Company is now receiving subscriptions for the third season of opera in this city, which will begin next November. The officials in charge of the subscriptions declare that the season seat holders will be more numerous by 70 per cent. than during the opera year just ended.

This is as it should be. The Boston Opera House has demonstrated in a most striking manner that grand opera in this city is just as good as grand opera in New York and better than in many of the most famous opera houses in Europe.

Huge sums of money have been risked. No expense has been spared to bring to Boston the most famous opera singers. A fortune has been spent to make the Boston productions scenically the equal of the best opera houses. "Are we going to lose money by giving opera so well?" was not asked. The work went right ahead because of confidence that the people of Boston would appreciate and support it.

For the third year Director Russell is planning splendid things. Many new operas will be added to the repertory, including the best of the modern French works. Several world-famous artists have been engaged to supplement the singers who were so popular during the past season. But no definite statement of next season's plans can be made so early.

"You have seen what we have accomplished during the first two years of opera in Boston. We shall do greater things next season," is Director Russell's confident prediction.

The confidence of the music lovers in the opera house is shown by the rate at which subscriptions are coming in. Where seats for one night per week were ordered last year, the same persons are now purchasing seats for two, three and four performances a week.

It is not a good thing for the general public to have a very large subscription list for the opera season, since it means that nearly all the good seats are sold for the year, and on important occasions it will be almost impossible to secure opera seats.

But experience has proved that an opera company must be supported by season subscription, and those who wish to purchase seats for single performances must be content to take what is left. Otherwise there might be no opera at all.

However, true lovers of music will make the best of the necessity of subscription. It is possible to secure one and two dollar seats for the entire season as well as the expensive ones, and young people of moderate means can club together to buy low priced seats for the season, without too heavy a drain on their purses.

During the past season it was possible to buy seats at the box office for almost any performance, because there were many seats unsubscribed. It now looks as though the subscriptions would cover most of the opera house, and those who refrain from subscribing for this reason will find too late that all seats are sold.

The Woman Who Smokes

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

EVERYWHERE the smoking woman is in evidence. She is a fungus growth on the tree of time.

In Burma she smokes a cigar as large as her wrist, and very ugly is the picture she makes, albeit she is a pretty woman as a rule.

The people of Japan and Java are undersized, and in both countries little children of six are seen smoking cigarettes.

One cannot help associating the two things—the habit and the stature.

In America, a wife and mother died last year leaving a little child of three weeks. The mother longed to live—prayed for life; but blood-poisoning set in, and she died. She was an intensely nervous woman and an incessant smoker of cigaretes.

Bankrupt in Vital Force

When maternity came and the extra demand was made upon her vitality she was not able to meet the demand.

She was bankrupt in vital force.

A thousand cases can be cited, no doubt, of other women who have died in childbed—women who did not smoke. Yet that does not prove the cigarette guiltless of having caused the death of this woman. Her nervous type and anaemic condition made her an easy victim.

A woman of talent believes it is her great mental endowments which send her once a year to a sanitarium for repairs.

But some of her friends and her nurses believe the cigarette habit to be the main cause. She smokes feverishly except when in the sanitarium.

Not a Beautiful Picture

There is no beauty in the picture of a woman with a cigarette between her lips.

There is no fascination in the smell of tobacco about her.

The man who smokes has not the same far-reaching influence on posterity as the woman who smokes. We may believe in one code of morals for both sexes, but we must admit that the father who smokes to excess for a year preceding the birth of his child is not the same menace to that child as the mother who indulges the habit during the same period of time.

Were the expectant mother to go into a nervous collapse, or were she to suffer from any of the disorders produced by nicotine poisoning, the result would be far more disastrous to the child than if the father suffered instead of the mother.

A Menace to Posterity

A child depends upon the mother's physical condition for its sustenance before it comes into life.

Therefore, the increasing numbers of women who smoke seem to menace posterity.

It is to be hoped the habit will pass away as other bad fashions have passed.

It is not pretty, it is not "smart," it is not wholesome, it is not attractive.

In time it must go.

Think naught a trifle, though it small appear;
Small sands the mountain, moments make the year,
And trifles life.

He Writes About Spring Poetry

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

WIFE, sed Pa, now that Spring has caim, I feel like a poet. How like a poet do you feel? sed Ma. Not vary much, I imagine.

Moar than you think, sed Pa. You see, Pa sed, thare has been a lot of Spring poets that rote mushy stuff, & after thay had rote it everybody got mad at Spring poetry, & it got to be the talk of all the comick sheets. As a matter of fack, Pa sed, thare has been many a flivver in the Spring poetry line.

What do you meen by a flivver? asked Ma. I doant like that slang. A flivver, sed Pa, is a poem or a song or a play that doesnt git oaver. But as old Bill Higgins of Lewiston onst sed. Beleeve me, kid, I am thare this time with the reel goods, & that aint no oil. I have rote a regular Spring poem.

All rite, sed Ma, & she sighed. Wen you are reddy, Gridley, you may fire. So this is what Pa red.

I luv the Spring, its daisies & its pinks,
No matter what the average person thinks.
I luv the first green sprouts that peerce the sod,
Clustered as thick as bricks in any hod.
Ah Spring, Oh Spring, it is of thee I sing,
Deeliteful, wunderful, amazing Spring.

That is fine, I toald Pa. Stop kidding yure father, Bobbie, Ma sed. I doant like that kind of talk. Reemember, he is far oalder than you. I doant like to see youth maiking fun of oald age. Cut it out.

Wife, sed Pa, it is possible that you doant like the first verse of my new song, but wen you git the rest you will understand me. Lissen:

In Spring the littel rills through the ice ooze,
In Spring we burn the straw & overshoes.
When can we shoot the duckling on the wing
If we cant shoot him in the vernal Spring?
Vernal Spring.
Eternal Spring
Of three I sing.

Terribul, sed Ma. Whare are you going to send it?

What is the matter with this poem, Pa

sed. Pa always gits kind of red in the face wen Ma talks to him that way. Pa is kind of stuck up & he hates to have Ma maik fun of him, beckaus he thinks moar of her that he does of annybody.

You always asked me to be frank with you, sed Ma, & now I am going to be frank. In fack, sed Ma, I will eeven be candid. I think that poem wich you have jest recsited to me is about the worst collecksbun of junk & punk that I have evver lissened to. You talk about flivvers, sed Ma, why, that is the worst flivver wich I have evver lissened to. Vernal Spring. Eternal Spring. of thee I sing. Ha Ha, sed Ma.

Pa got mad then & tear up his poem.
